U. S. Tankers To Be Serving Britain Inside Month's Time

First Installment

Fifty American tankers, first increment of the 2,000,000 tons of United States shipping ordered into the service of Britain's war effort by President Roosevelt, soon will be operating in their new role.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, made the announcement yesterday, less than 24 hours after the President had called on him to prepare the war service tonnage, totaling more than one-fourth of this country's present merchant marine.

Admiral Land said all operators of tankers of more than 5,000 tons have been called on to participate in the program.

The tankers will remain under United States registry, it is intended, and will be used to transport oil from South America to North Atlantic ports. Their cargoes can easily be transferred to British tankers for the much shorter dash across the North Atlantic. The arrangement is expected to reduce by one-third the time required for Britain to transport oil home from South America.

American crews will man the tankers.

Operators of some of the tankers told Land they could deliver the ships within two or three days. All will be in service, it is expected, within a month.

Seizure Legislation Weighed

Meanwhile, legislation to enable the President to take over all foreign shipping lying idle in American waters was under consideration by the Senate Commerce Committee is expected to receive committee approval next week.

Chairman Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, said he had no plans for calling further witnesses on the bill and would press for prompt action on the measure at the committee's next meeting, called for Wednesday. The bill has been approved by the House Merchant Marine Committee and is scheduled for House debate Monday.

Adm. Land, yesterday testified before the committee in secret session. Other witnesses were J. H. Isbrandtsen, chairman of the Danish shipping committee, and James W. Ryan, general counsel.

Land told the committee there are 83 foreign vessels now immobilized in American ports, totaling 450,000 tons. Seventy of these ships have already been taken into "protective custody," he said, and the pending legislation is designed to authorize their use by the United States or transfer to Britain.

The bill also authorizes the Maritime Commission to charter or purchase American-owned vessels whenever it finds that more

The future of America's folk music seems to be safe in the keeping of the District's school children. Three thousand of them, with an equivalent number of teachers and parents, jammed Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon for the initial program of the eighth annual National Folk Festival and cheered old favorites with lusty applause.

An adult audience, equally enthusiastic, attended the evening program. There will be two programs today and two tomorrow, and when the venerable Frank Andrews, Town Crier of Provincetown, Mass., announces the final feature more than 500 folk minstrels, dancers, fiddlers and dulcimer players, banjo pickers, and ballad and folk singers will have appeared on the Festival stage. They are here from 24 States and Haiti.

For Washington children the opening of the folk festival has come to

A national inventory control of 16 major defense metals, including steel, lead, copper and tin, coupled with strict rules forbidding any deliveries of them in excess of current demands, was ordered yesterday by OPM Priorities Director E. R. Stettinius, jr. The action is intended to prevent undue and excessive accumulation of defense materials.

The drastic order, calling for answers to a questionnaire on present inventories and monthly requirements, and demanding sworn statements by suppliers and users that they are complying by not shipping or buying in excess of normal needs, applies to major producers and suppliers and extends to virtually every small machine and metal working shop in the Nation.

Although Stettinius did not mention the situation directly, it was understood that the new order is

A five-man panel of the National Defense Mediation Board yesterday began its exploration here of the issues in the General Motors Corporation dispute as a means to forestall what threatens to be the defense program's most serious strike.

Simultaneously, settlements in two other disputes certified to the board, those of the Kellogg Switchboard & Supply Co., and the Phelps-Dodge Copper Products Co. were announced.

Two and one-half hour conferences with members of General Motors' personnel department and leaders of the C. I. It was understood that the sessions had been devoted only to hearing the presentation of the positions and objectives of both parties. Meeting will re-

'Fresh as a Flapper'

'Aunt Lizzie,' 110, Has Flu; Tenth Marriage Must Wait

By the Associated Press

Sapulpa, Okla., May 1.—If "Aunt Lizzie" Deevers wasn't in bed with influenza, she'd be celebrating her 110th birthday today by walking down a church aisle—a bride for the tenth time.

The bright-eyed, witty little Sapulpan, feeling "fresh as a flapper" and itching to be up and about, admitted she was in love again, this time with John Knight, a 77-year-old neighbor.

Now that romance has come into her life again, Aunt Lizzie said she needed only three things to make her birthday complete—a monkey, a canary bird and "a ride in one of them airplanes."

Aunt Lizzie's father was a full-blood Cherokee Indian. Her mother was Irish and Dutch.

She walked with the Cherokees over the "Trail of Tears" to Oklahoma and still is mad at the pale-faces because "they wouldn't let us stop and bury my pore old grandmother," who died on the trail.

She smokes a pipe and uses snuff, but when offered a cigarette she shook her head.

Mention of the war in Europe makes Aunt Lizzie's eyes blaze.

"They're comin' over here, shore as shootin'," she said. "When they git to Sapulpa, I'm agoin' to git in it. Why, I could shoot the hat off your head and never touch you."

Lizzie doesn't believe in divorces. She outlived all her husbands and expects to live longer than her father, who died at 115.

A. W. Hawkes Elected Head Of Chamber

New President Runs Congoleum Company; Eccles and Alvord Disagree on Taxes

Albert W. Hawkes, who reversed Horace Greeley's advice and went East to make his fortune, was elected president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday.

He was born in Chicago 62 years ago and studied law at the Chicago College of Law. When he was 37 he left Chicago and for the last 25 years has lived in the East.

In the World War period, he was director of the Chemical Alliance, Inc., an agency established by the Government to assist the United States and its allies in procuring chemicals for war production. He resigned as executive vice president of the General Chemical Co. in 1926 to become president of Congoleum-Nairn, Inc., of Kearny, N. J., a post he still holds. He lives in Montclair, N. J.

Eccles and Alvord Disagree

A clash of views between Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and Ellsworth C. Alvord, of this city, chairman of the chamber's finance committee, developed at a session devoted to "Federal Fiscal Policies—1941."

Chairman Eccles called for heavy corporate income and excess profits taxes, "substantially" higher personal income taxes and a widening of the base for such taxes. He urged a "selective" sales tax on automobiles, mechanical refrigerators and other products that use up resources needed in armaments.

He opposed a general sales tax, and he also opposed a curtailment of agricultural benefits or any abandonment of Government "social efforts" where the problem is not met by improved employment growing out of the defense program.

Eccles said he was "wholeheartedly in accord" with the objectives of the taxation policy recently announced by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

Tax Program Called Severe

Alvord said the Treasury methods of raising $3,500,000,000 were "severe and unrealistic." Compared with taxes paid this year, he said, the Treasury program represents an increase of 80 per cent in income taxes, 100 per cent in estate and gift taxes, and 60 per cent in excise taxes.

Alvord asked if an effort was being made to "liquidate" the American middle class.

"The rates proposed by the Treasury," he said, "would raise havoc with those persons with fixed incomes and definite commitments, which includes everyone in the $2,000 to $20,000-income field.

"These are the people who have debts to pay and insurance to keep up, who are buying homes on installments and sending children through school. Furthermore, what happens to this group if the cost of living increases 5 per cent within the next two years? They are the

British Give Beaverbrook Wider Powers; Italy, Reich See U.S. as 100% Enemy, Rome Says

Duce's Newspaper Warns American Forces Face Attack If Put on Convoy Duty

By the United Press

Rome, May 1.—Premier Mussolini's newspaper announced today that Germany and Italy have decided to regard the United States as "a 100 per cent enemy," and warned of the danger of Axis attacks on the United States fleet and air force.

Italy's leading political commentator, Mario Appelius, issued the warning in an article in Il Duce's Milan newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, describing President Roosevelt's Atlantic patrol project as a "hypocritical attempt to provoke war."

The Italo-German Axis, he said, has made every effort to remain at peace with the United States, but have no course now except to sink all war material shipments headed for Britain, whether or not they are protected by American warships and planes.

"Any ship loaded with arms or raw materials for Britain will be inexorably attacked by bombs and torpedoes and, if possible, sunk, whatever the nationality of the naval or air escort which is convoying it . . . the Axis decision is categorical and recognizes no exceptions," Appelius wrote.

He added that, without this United States' aid, the war would have been ended long ago.

The rest of the press, meanwhile, accused Mr. Roosevelt of "personal methods characterizing the worst kind of dictatorship" and said the United States must react at once against his policies or be driven into war.

Virginio Gayda, writing in the Giornale d'Italia today, described the President as an undemocratic dictator who is creating a chasm between the Government and the people.

Notes With Amazement

"The attitude of the Washington Government toward Italy, Germany, Japan, Hungary, Bulgaria, Rumania, Slovakia and Croatia is the attitude of an enemy and merits being treated as such," Appelius wrote.

"The Axis never nourished hatred against the United States and its people. The Axis now feels that the Washington Government is a 100 per cent enemy motivated by the blackest intentions.

"The Axis notes with amazement that Roosevelt's despotic will is stronger than the so-called sovereign will of the North American people and eminent men such as Hoover and Lindbergh are powerless before the President."

Writers Describe 'Perfect Hell' Of British Flight From Greece

How two American newspapermen saw the epic retreat of British forces from Greece is told in the following dispatches. One is by Edward Kennedy, of the Associated Press, who served three years in the Washington bureau before he was sent to Europe. The other is by Richard D. McMillan, veteran war correspondent of the United Press.

By Richard D. McMillan
United Press Staff Writer

With the British evacuated from Greece, via Cairo, May 1.—The rear guard of Britain's army rescued from Greece battled and defeated a strong force of German parachute troops landed on the Gulf of Corinth in a last desperate effort to entrap the battered "Anzacs" whose valor had piled Greece's mountain passes with German dead.

Laying down their wounded and dying, whom they had lugged all the way down from Mount Olympus, the Australians and New Zealanders wrote an epic last chapter to the Battle of Greece against an attack that "filled the air with falling parachutes."

Throughout those final hours of agony, the British imperials were

With the British Expeditionary Force Arrived at Cairo from Greece, May 1.—British imperial troops who fought the German invaders of Greece have come back to Egypt after the loss of perhaps 8,000 tanks and trucks and many first-line planes, a loss which they believe to be more than balanced by the far heavier German losses of similar equipment.

Most of the British tanks never got away from the Mount Olympus line, where they were wrecked or destroyed after inflicting severe losses on the Germans.

The R. A. F. saved most of its pilots, for the great German numerical superiority in the air enabled the Nazi fliers to bomb the R. A. F. planes to bits when they

This IS an Epic

Two Canadians Fly Bomber Six Hours With Ailerons Gone

By the Associated Press

London, May 1.—Two Canadian fliers maneuvered a huge flying boat for six hours over the Atlantic after its ailerons had been torn off, and brought it safely into a British harbor in what the ministry of aircraft production said today was "one of the greatest epics of flying."

The ailerons (movable surfaces of the wing which provide lateral control) were ripped away by wind action after the robot pilot of the 15-ton patrol plane jammed.

R. A. F. Flight Lieut. J. G. Fleming, of Calgary, holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross, and Flying Officer J. J. Meikle, of Toronto, with two flight engineers and two civilian radio operators were flying the Catalina (Consolidated) PBY flying boat from Bermuda at an altitude of 18,500 feet when the robot jammed while the starboard aileron was "full down."

As Fleming and his crew jettisoned flares, tool kits and other equipment in desperate efforts to stabilize the plane, they plunged to 800 feet, where the second aileron broke off and the balance of the plane was automatically restored.

Leveling off just above the water, the pilots considered an SOS, but Fleming was confident of reaching England and instead signaled by radio "both ailerons gone."

This message was received but nobody believed it. It seemed impossible that so big a ship still could be flying without lateral control.

Fleming and Meikle turned the machine gently from south to east, although use of the rudder without lateral control might have sent the ship into a flat and fatal spin.

They finally brought the plane down within 3 miles of the intended mooring.

"Since this astounding flight," the ministry account concluded, "Fleming has flown the Atlantic once and Meikle twice."

More British Land in Iraq

By the Associated Press

London, May 1.—New and strong forces of the British imperial army stood guard tonight in Iraq, in the path of a vast Axis pincers which appears to have begun already a sweep aimed at engulfment of Suez, Egypt and the rich old fields of Asia Minor.

Authoritative sources disclosed that additional British forces had been landed at Basra, over the opposition of the new Iraq government and in the face of Iraq army concentrations which, they feared, are threatening the British air base at Habanniyah, on the Euphrates.

This base is 60 miles west of Baghdad. Authoritative sources said they had heard reports that Nazi agents were "intriguing" recently in Iraq, and expressed the hope that the Iraq government will show plainly that such intrigues are not effective.

The additional contingents sent to Iraq, following the initial landings of April 17 and 18, presumably are there for these reasons:

1. To discourage the Germans from trying to send air and seaborne troops to next-door Syria, protectorate of beaten France, and make Syria a base for a drive on Suez.

2. Stiffen Turkey's back against

Fierce Battle Raging at Tobruk; Nazis Crack Outer Defenses

By the Associated Press

Cairo, May 1.—German shock troops cracked the outer defenses of Tobruk, Libya, today after an all-night battle launched with the hope of wiping out that British threat to the Axis drive toward the Suez Canal.

Tanks led the way in the action, which was continuing late today.

It was too early tonight to tell how the fighting would end, informed sources said, but they declared there appeared to be little to distinguish the battle from previous attacks on Tobruk which have been repulsed.

To relieve pressure on the Tobruk garrison, British warships turned their big guns on Axis troop and supply trucks moving along the coastal road west of Tobruk at Ain El Gazala. The bombardment was "successful," the admiralty said.

Ain El Gazala is about 30 miles from Tobruk and just beyond Tobruk's defenses, a vast area of anti-tank ditches, machine-gun nests, steel and concrete forts and troop dugouts.

Axis columns swept past Tobruk April 8 in the surprise drive rolling the British back from Bengasi. They have penetrated 5 or 6 miles into Egypt in the Salum area.

Tobruk, however, is 80 miles inside Libya and constitutes a dangerous wedge in the side of Axis communications — already considered tenuous enough because of the 800 miles to the major German-Italian

Churchill's Deputy

Copyright by New York Times

London, May 1.—Cabinet changes which may have far-reaching effects on the British war efforts were ordered today in which Lord Beaverbrook moved from the ministry of aircraft production to the ministry of state, and a hitherto little known man named F. J. Leathers was given charge of a new job, the ministry of shipping and transport.

With these and other changes, the British cabinet has now assumed a strange complexion. Lord Beaverbrook has been Prime Minister Churchill's major hornet and he is now given a job in which his buzzing will be most likely to be listened to and least likely to be distracted by administrative duties.

It is regarded by some as the beginning of the end of Lord Beaverbrook and at the same time by others as the beginning of his effort really to assert himself in this government.

[An Associated Press dispatch said Lord Beaverbrook would be virtual economic dictator and deputy prime minister of the United Kingdom.

[The dispatch added that Beaverbrook, who has been credited with stepping up Britain's airplane production to a pace required to meet the German challenge, would become virtual director of the production of tanks, guns and other war materials—shortage of which is being largely blamed for the Balkan defeat.

[While Beaverbrook is presumably directing the economic phases of the war, Churchill will be free to devote his time to military, naval and diplomatic aspects.]

It is suspected Lord Beaverbrook will be a liaison officer between Downing Street and all productive areas, helping the cabinet form new ideas to step up production while interpreting to them the efforts going on.

Brand New Job

It is a brand new job in this government. Lord Beaverbrook is being given a job without specific limitations and is being asked to produce miracles. Although the creation of the job is remarkable, still more so is the idea that there must be a real hard-boiled publisher doing it.

Lord Beaverbrook has been one of the most successful publicists this island has known. He has found ways to make his newspapers reach millions. He has now got the job of making his government reach the same masses with the same effectiveness.

These are the people realigned in the cabinet: Lord Beaverbrook as minister of state; Lieut. Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon as minister of air-

Nazis Reported Pouring North From Balkans

By the United Press

New York, May 1.—Private advices to the United Press from the Balkans late tonight reported "incessant streams" of German troops and trucks moving through the Balkans, some of them to the northwestward.

Although strong units appeared to be moving in the direction of the Russian frontiers, competent quarters were quoted as saying that neither Germany nor Russia would precipitate a clash and that no undue strain in German-Russian relations had been noted.

For the last week the German forces have been moving northward, almost at the same tempo that they poured southward just before the start of the Balkan blitzkrieg and the invasions of Yugoslavia and Greece on April 6, these advices said.

Many of the German troops appear to be returning to the bases of Adolf Hitler's Austrian "troop pool," but others are being diverted to Slovakia simultaneously with the suspension there of public railroad traffic.

An estimate of the size of the German troop movements, beyond the statement that they are huge, could not be obtained but among the German forces were believed to be elite Nazi units returning to Austria for a week or more of rest before being "reassigned."

Surplus German troops who have been in Vienna throughout the Balkan blitzkreig were said to be "moving elsewhere" and were believed to include some Slovakian units.

The German troop movements were said to have aroused intense speculation as to the state of German-Russian relations and some quarters in the Balkans saw an approaching or threatened crisis.

These German forces, the United Press' private advices said, are well supplied with fuel and "it is no exaggeration to say they're swimming in it."

Competent quarters said that Germany, by moving the large forces up to the Russian frontiers, may intend to warn Russia without actually inviting a clash with the Soviets.

U. S. Aides See Berlin, Moscow Showdown

Evidence of increasing tension between Germany and the Soviet Union is seen from reports reaching here while both countries are concentrating huge armies on the border of the Ukraine, the Russian granary upon which Germany has long focussed her ambitions. Officials who never previously seriously envisioned a clash between the two countries believe the present tension may lead to a conflict by early July unless the Soviet Union makes substantial concessions to Germany.

The Germans are said to have a total of 2,000,000 men along the western frontier of Russia, extending from former Polish territory down into Rumania along the Ukranian border, not to mention the German troops in the northernmost part of Norway which might be used in a drive on Murmansk, the important Russian port on the White Sea.

The Russians, on the other hand, well aware of the German threat, are said to have 2,000,000 troops ready to defend the borders of the Ukraine with another 2,000,000 in reserve.

The declaration of Soviet Commissar Marshal Tomoshenko in Moscow yesterday that the Red Army is ready to "offer an annihilating rebuff to any attempted encroachment of our soil by imperialists" was generally regarded here as a warning to Germany.

From reports reaching here, it is believed that the Germans are now bringing considerable pressure to bear on the Russians to obtain a foothold in the Ukraine by granting the Germans special rights to exploitation of oil resources and other privileges.

Russian Military Parades for May Day

By the Associated Press

Moscow, May 1.—Masses of truck-borne infantry and new motorized artillery were star attractions today in Russia's traditional May Day parade in Red Square and Defense Commissar S. K. Timoshenko told spectators that the Red Army was mobilized against "accidents" and "the tricks of our foreign enemies."

There were fewer foot soldiers than before and less of the usual field artillery.

An aerial procession of 300 warplanes concluded the show.

The Soviet official news agency Tass said in its report of the parade that an "especially strong impression" was created by dive-bombers.

Tass also said long range guns participated for the first time in the show and that the tanks were led across the square by a great number of "land destroyers."

The news agency reported about 2,000,000 persons took part in a five-hour demonstration.

Among the diplomats who watched was the German ambassador, Count Friedrich Werner von der Schulenburg, who has just returned from a consultation with Adolf Hitler.

Stalin witnessed the spectacle.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

GERMAN SHOCK TROOPS cracked the outer defenses of Tobruk, Libya (1), yesterday and British warships turned their guns on Axis troop trucks at El Gazala to relieve pressure on the Tobruk garrison. British observers expected Axis attempt to reach the Nile and Suez from Libya by sending forces from Greece to Syria and Palestine (2) by land or by sea and air routes (dotted lines). Nazi air force moved in this direction by blasting British base on Crete. Britain landed more troops at Basara, Iraq (3) in a move to guard Mosul oil fields, protect the British airbase at Habanniyah and discourage any German move into Syria under a merciless deluge of German bombs which made the evacuation from Greece "worse than Dunkerque."

Witness Describes Evacuation of Greece

It was worse because the German Luftwaffe, aided by an elaborate espionage system set up in Greece, was able, with its crushing superiority, to shatter the R. A. F.'s airdromes and virtually rule the skies over Greece and the Greek coasts, I was told by the battle-worn survivors who came out of Greece with me.

But while the struggle lasted—through the final bitter battle against the parachutists on the Gulf of Corinth—the British gave them "perfect hell," in the words of a rugged Australian brigadier.

Unable to halt the British evacuations despite the murderous rain of bombs, the Germans landed parachute troops by the thousands at a principal bridge of the Corinth Canal west of Athens, the Daphne naval base and other points around Athens in an effort to entrap and annihalte the British imperial rear guard. The Daphne naval base is at the top of the Aegan, southwest of Salonika.

Reich Marshal Hermann Goering's crack parachutists—they seemed to fill the sky—blew up the Corinth Canal bridge in an attempt to cut off British escape and battled the Aussies and New Zealanders in fierce hand-to-hand combat.

It was the last Battel of Greece.

"The air was filled with parachutes, some of which failed to open," a grimy Australian, almost unable to stand because of fatigue, told me as we zig-zagged across the Mediterranean aboard a transport crammed with troops and dogged by German bombers.

"The Germans dropped to earth hundreds at a time. Some of them were killed instanly as they hit the ground like a rock and bounded into the air.

"The Germans used red parachutes for landing mortars and white ones for soldiers and machine-gunners.

"The fields and roadways were littered with corpses swathed in the folds of parachutes like shrouds, killed either by the failure of their chutes to open or by our fire.

"I can tell you our Maoris gave those Jerries the fright of their lives.

"The Maoris rushed at them in bunches, shouting native war cries and leaping up and down in their tribal war dances.

"Hitler's young blitzmen ran for their lives, but more battalions rained from the sky to reinforce them."

Because of the blowing up of the bridge some of the New Zealanders were cut off from escape and were compelled, against what must have seemed suicidal odds, to fight their way to the coast hour after hour as Nazi machine-gunners on motorcycles slashed in upon them.

"We fought through to the beaches where our navy's guns gave us protection and jumped into whatever boats we could find to get out to our ships," one of the Australians related.

Boats Riddled by Bullets

"Many of our boats were riddled with bullets."

Near Sunium the Germans landed parachute troops, but most of them were carried out to sea and drowned when the wind suddenly shifted. The others were picked off like birds on a limb as they floated down.

In the vicinity of Daphne naval base the parachute troops cooperated with German "panzer" land forces and it was here that the fierce-fighting Greek Evzones made a solmen pact with the New Zealander comrades to fight to death, to the last man.

They went into action with flashing bayonets against the encircling German parachutists until there were only dead Germans around them. Then they headed for the beaches.

The main beaches used for the amazing British evacuations were Porto Rafti, Neuplion, Megara, Kalamai, Theodora and Giftuoin, in the Athens region.

The rescue ships, protected by British warships of all sizes and types, moved in under the murderous attacks of Germany's dive-bombing Stukas—and we went out the same way—hugging the coast and halting to pick up exhausted stragglers waving frantically.

The last British imperials to leave, after the final struggle against the parachute troops, were men almost dropping with fatigue themselves, but wading out into the water with wounded comrades on their backs.

Trucks Fall Into Bomb Craters

Hour upon hour every road and byways leading south from Athens and toward the Gulf of Corinth was bombed by the Luftwaffe.

Ships in ports were set ablaze and trucks tumbled into huge bomb craters in the road and overturned.

The roads and valleys screamed with death as the men of the British Expeditionary Force trudged to the beaches, bandaged but unbroken, their wounded carried on their backs or limping along with aid of others.

I limped along, dodging bombs and fighting fatigue and hunger, beside these valiant veterans of an epic struggle against insurmountable odds.

They were the sons of Britain's "old contemptibles," Cockneys and upper crust, Anzacs who had rekindled the flame of Gallipoli and Flanders Fields.

They had fought their way down from the snowy mountains to the north, battling every step of the way. At night they crouched in ravines and gulleys to escape the fury of the Luftwaffe. Dawn brought more fighting against the terrific odds.

Many of the British rear guard forces were forced to struggle down through the Peloponnesus to escape. These included men of the Royal Air Force who had lost their planes in the bombardments of their airdromes by wave upon wave of dive-bombers.

Human Bridge for Wounded

An officer of the R. A. F. told how the wounded were loaded in a rowboat and taken out to a waiting Sunderland flying boat which, under constant bombing and machine-gunning, shuttled back and forth in relays from Greece and points of safety across the Mediterranean.

"A husky sergeant held our rowboat fast to the Sunderland and formed a bridge with his broad back over which the wounded were passed," the flying officer related.

Dutch naval officers, whose ship was sunk by German dive-bombers while aiding in the evacuation, told me that more than 2,000 men were aboard when the ship was bombed, but every man was saved within 45 minutes.

"Destroyers and lifeboats came alongside and took them out to other craft. It was marvelous to watch the coolness of those men," the Dutch officers said.

40,000 Britons 'Lost,' Nazis Say

Berlin (Friday), May 2 (AP).—German military sources said early today that two-thirds of the British Expeditionary Force, or about 40,000 men, can be regarded as "lost" in Greece.

Germans Open Air Offensive In Crete, Egypt

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 1.—The Nazi air force unleashed today what authorized sources described as an intensified offensive in North Africa and blasted at ships in Suda Harbor on the island of Crete.

The high command gave no intimation as to the direction of the next German thrust in the southeast, but Berlin newspapers significantly began discussing "the vulnerability of the island of Crete," barely 100 miles south of the Nazi army which is completing the conquest of Peloponnesus.

Crete, to which King George and his government fled shortly before Hitler's troops entered Athens, also is only 200 miles from Africa—a short hop for transport planes carrying parachutists or air infantry.

Government offices in Berlin observed May day but Nazi newspapers continued without pause to sound the warning that any American ship which enters the war zones must expect to be sunk. They stressed the German view that if President Roosevelt sends warships or merchantmen into these zones it will be a deliberate courting of danger "with the object of inviting incidents."

The Luftwaffe's intensified North African activity today included the bombing of British troop columns and artillery positions in advance of German ground forces, Germans said, while at Crete a tanker and two large merchantment were damaged in Suda Harbor, the British base.

In the West the high command claimed successful air attacks were made on harbor facilities in southern and eastern England, while other raiders sank a small freighter off Scotland and damaged two additional freighters and a destroyer "so seriously that their loss is presumed."

of Malta hourly during the last three days "have reduced to a mass of debris" a large part of the harbor works at Valletta, the official Italian news agency Stefani reported tonight.

Axis offensive warfare now has been "intensified" over the whole Mediterranean basin, the agency said. Attacks also have been carried out on the Greek Island of Crete, on British troop ships carrying the last survivors from Greece to Africa, and on British positions in north Africa.

British ships attempting to land reinforcements at besieged Tobruk also were attacked, Stefani said.

The Italian high command said, "Large damage and fires were caused" in the steady raids on Malta, and also told of Italian torpedo boat attacks on "a strongly escorted enemy convoy," in which a cruiser and big destroyer were struck.

Italian parachutists occupied the Greek Islands of Cephalonia, Zante and San Maura off the Greek west coast. News dispatches said a full company of troops floated down on Cephalonia with parachutes of red, green and white—the colors of the Italian flag.

Writer Tells of Bombs Raining in Greece

were on the ground and unoccupied. The British estimated they had downed about 10 per cent of the German planes, with a high toll of German pilots.

Here is the way the British escaped:

Whole British battalions lay concealed beneath the trees by day as the soldiers waited for boats, and the German dive bombers searched vainly for them.

By night the beaches were alive with men, the sea cluttered with boats. Every vessel that could pass muster was used and the greater part—the British now say 48,000 out of 60,000—got away.

Little materiel could be taken away but most of that which was left behind was destroyed. The Germans, when they reached the shore, found the woods full of wrecked vehicles, destroyed supplies.

The British came down to the sea with their rifles, packs and machine guns, and most of them carried them away with them.

In the cases of bigger guns, the breeches were torn off before they were abandoned.

Many trucks were merely rolled into the sea, others pitched over cliffs so the Germans could never use them.

In some cases, hand grenades were used to destroy British vehicles; others were chopped to pieces with axes or set afire with gasoline.

With the R. A. F. having lost its forward air fields by the break through the Mount Olympus line, and with the Greeks near collapse, for all their valiant struggle, the British decided on the afternoon of April 22 to pull out.

With a motley group of Australian troops, civilian refugees and 130 German prisoners, I left Piraeus on the last boat out of that port of Athens. Our little boat, jammed with nearly 1,000 persons, left the harbor at night, shortly before midnight, and got clear just as the Germans bombed the port for the fourth time in 24 hours.

Piraeus already was a jungle of broken and twisted wreckage when we left, threading our way through channels strewn with German airborne mines.

Arring at Crete by noon, we found our port there under steady German and Italian air attack. I saw one ship go down in seven minutes, but our own was not touched.

Going ashore, we learned that King George II of Greece, the premier and the royal household had arrived in Crete in a British plane April 23.

There were no arrangements for receiving royalty, but a station wagon was obtained and in it the monarch was driven for 4½ hours over Crete's rough mountain roads to his destination.

Crete will be defended, and the rugged island, with snowcapped peaks and scarcely any level ground, lends itself to defense. A British general told me it could and would be held, and the Greeks agreed.

The crew of our Greek ship did not want to go farther, so most of the refugees were taken to a camp ashore. The Australians and I stayed aboard for another day, then came on to Egypt on an oil tanker.

Sitting atop 6,000 tons of oil at sea with dive-bombers playing about overhead does not induce calm nerves, but nothing serious happened.

Cloudy days are rare at this time of the year in the Mediterranean, but we got one overcast sky, with a bitter wind and a cold, piercing rain.

"Nice cloudy day, sir," said the mate to the captain as gray dawn arrived. Everybody laughed, but it was nice weather for us, because bombers could not locate us, and we came safely through to Egypt.

The problem of British troops in Greece was complicated by the fact that Greece had only two harbors with facilities for unloading heavy British materials. These were Piraeus, adjoining Athens, and Salonika.

Salonika fell early into German hands, and Piraeus was quickly wrecked by German bombs.

This prevented landing of any more effective aid, and it was decided to withdraw the British Expeditionary Forces, with their comparatively low casualties up to that time—much lower than they already had inflicted on the Germans—rather than try to continue holding back a German force of at least 30 divisions (300,000 or more men) against the British 60,000.

When this decision was made, the British had just installed themselves on the so-called Thermopylae line, an elliptical front running from Thermopylae on the Aegean to a point near the ancient Oracle of Delphi on the Gulf of Corinth.

The withdrawal to this line had been most orderly, despite terrific and constant German attacks.

I was in the withdrawal with British, Australian and New Zealand troops falling back in their vehicles behind covering forces. They were somewhat chastened by the fury of the German attacks which drove them from the Mount Olympus line, but still were grimly determined to defend the new positions.

It had been planned to make an intermediate stand north of Lamia, but this was abandoned primarily because of the danger of Germans landing plane troops and parachutists on the plain just to the south.

The Germans did use air-borne troops but did not succeed in landing them behind the British lines. They resorted to parachutists later to grab the single bridge over the Corinthian Canal to keep the British from blowing it up, and also landed troops by plane in the Peloponnesus later.

This speeded up their penetration of southern Greece, but it had little effect on the British, who by that time had mostly withdrawn.

Thermopylae itself, which is a shelf of land between the cliffs and the sea, was filled with barbed wire and tank traps.

We tarried there long enough to bathe in the hot springs from which the place takes its name—the hot gates.

Strong positions were taken up on the main road farther west, and other British imperial troops dug in on the rugged mountains which formed the rest of that line.

But no great "modern battle of Thermopylae" ever was fought. Instead, the pass was held merely by covering parties for the evacuation line and there was no truly major contact between the British and Germans after the withdrawal from the Olympus sector.

The German air attacks on all the roads were so heavy that most of the withdrawals were by night. The nights of April 22 and 23 were moonless. This, together with the fact that the earlier Olympus withdrawals were achieved on two rainy nights, which kept the Germans out of the air, was of tremendous importance to the British.

Some British troops got to the beach of the Evvoia (Euboea) Channel south of Khalkis, and were picked up by small boats. Others were taken off at many points along the Aegean coast.

The bulk of the army cut across Attica to the Megara-Handara region.

Here heavy bombings indicated that the Germans suspected their presence, so instead of embarking there they moved by night across the Corinthian Canal that almost bisects the Isthmus, and reached the shores of the eastern Peloponnesus, mainly on the Gulf of Argos.

There the biggest embarkations took place the nights of April 24 and April 27.

In all the great withdrawal, I did not see one incident of panic. It went off with astonishing smoothness considering the circumstances.

This was due mainly to the rank and file, for contact with the top organization was broken.

Getting the wounded out was the most staggering problem.

But Hurricanes Never Came

Cairo, May 1 (AP).—In their fight and withdrawal from Greece, British troops were bombed at least 50 times a day with no way of hitting back.

"Just wait, the Hurricanes will come," one New Zealand corporal told his complaining men, speaking as tenderly as a mother soothing a child. "They must be holding them back to let the Jerries have it all at once."

But the Hurricanes did not come.

As an example of what the R. A. F. was up against, the Germans one morning attacked the Argos landing field every three minutes until every plane there was destroyed.

Sen. Guffey Urges Convoys To Mid-Atlantic

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday heard from a stanch Administration supporter an appeal for naval convoys "at least to the mid-Atlantic" and learned that it faces a full-dress debate on the convoy issue within the next fortnight.

Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, in one of his rare speeches on the floor, widely interpreted as an Administration "feeler" on convoy policy, asked if Americans "are going on forever being bluffed by Hitler?"

The Pennsylvania New Dealer said he was not alarmed by the possibility that Nazi submarines or surface raiders might attack American warships on convoy duty.

"If there were any shooting," he declared, "they would have to start it, and whatever action we took would be an action in defense."

Notice of the impending convoy debate was served by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, who announced that he will offer his anticonvoy resolution, rejected by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday, as an amendment to the Bland-George shipping bill.

The bill to enable the United States to take over foreign shipping idle in American waters is expected to receive House approval next week and reach the Senate floor the following week.

Leaders Aren't Alarmed

Tobey, renewing his charges that the Administration has tried to smother free Congressional discussion of "a matter of life and death to the American people," said "no amount of White House pressure" could block his new plan for bringing the convoy issue to debate.

Senate Administration leaders displayed no alarm at Tobey's announcement. Majority Leader Barkley said there was "nothing in the world" to stop Tobey from offering his anticonvoy amendment to the shipping bill and added:

"I have no reason to think it would get any more than 35 votes, which was about the maximum strength for the anticonvoy amendments to the lend-lease bill."

(Three amendments to the lend-lease bill, variously phrased but all including bans on convoys, were defeated by 52 to 39, 60 to 30 and 63 to 28.)

Taft and Nye Indignant

Senators Taft (Republican), of Ohio, and Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, yesterday joined in Tobey's denunciation of the Administration's alleged lack of candor on the convoy issue.

"It is perfectly apparent," said Taft, "that the Administration is gradually edging into a convoy policy which will mean war for the United States and is doing it in such a way as to avoid seeking the approval of Congress."

Taft attacked the proconvoy argument that "there is no use making this war material for the British if it's not going to get to Britain."

The same line of reasoning, he said, would justify "sending American boys to Europe to make sure that this war material is used."

Senator Guffey, in his call for convoys "at least half way" to Britain, said that if Hitler had wanted to declare war on the United States he would not have waited this long, since convoys would be "no more provocative" than the seizure of German ships in American harbors or the repair of British warships in American yards.

The United States has pledged Britain every aid short of war, Guffey said, but "we are not carrying out that promise." If Britain goes down, he continued, "we will be left practically alone to meet the most powerful war machine ever devised."

Assails "Mealy-Mouthed" Course

"Why should we be mealy-mouthed in our course toward a power that had declared itself committed to destroy democracy the world over?" he demanded.

Tobey at one point interrupted Guffey to remind him that President Roosevelt, "the man you represent on the floor of the Senate," has said convoys would mean shooting and shooting is close to war.

"In most things I bow to the wisdom of our great President," Guffey declared, "but I feel, and I hope he feels, that whatever risks are involved in convoying our ships, at least to the mid-Atlantic, are justified in the face of the peril that confronts us."

Queen Hails King's Tommy Gun Aim

London, May 1 (INS).—If King George should meet an invader, and has his "Tommy" gun handy—the foe's chances of escaping the royal marksmanship would be slight.

The King gave a demonstration of his aim today when he peppered a man-shaped target from the shoulder position and then from the hip in what he called "cinema style." Queen Elizabeth stood by and applauded. Afterwards the King praised the American-invented submachine guns as war weapons.

shipping is needed for America's foreign commerce or for bringing to the United States defense materials.

Representatives of almost all American tanker operators came here yesterday to talk over the aid plan with commission officials.

Admiral Land appealed for cooperation, saying all American industry was being called upon to make sacrifices. He quickly added, however, that the tankers must be provided — by requisitioning, if necessary.

A commission official said the operators' representatives agreed to the plan "in principle," although details, including the method of compensation, remain to be worked out.

In still another shipping development, the Maritime Commission advised owners of ships under U. S. registry and shipping conferences operating outside the European War zone that proposals contemplating "further increases in transportation costs . . . must be viewed as unjustifiable and as adding an unnecessary burden to the public."

It is said such proposals are being made by "certain ocean carriers," despite previous commission suggestions to the contrary and warned that it will take "whatever action it deems suitable or necessary to insure the maintenance of transportation charges within reasonable and proper levels."

Alexandria Club Asks Convoys

Willkie Urges Ships, Convoys For Britain

By the Associated Press

New York, May 1.—Ships and more ships for Britain—and convoyed ships if necessary—were urged today by Wendell L. Willkie, if Britain is to survive.

"Furnish to Britain today and tomorrow and the next day for her desperate need, ships—the ships in our docks, the ships in our coastwise trade—until it hurts, the impounded ships of other nations, the ships we are building," he said.

"Give to her destroyers, and if necessary see that those ships loaded with the ever-increasing production of American factories and farms deliver their cargoes safely to the ports of western and northern England."

"Thus will England survive," Willkie said in an article in the current issue of Colliers in which he presents the "international view," in reply to the isolationist viewpoint expounded by Charles A. Lindbergh in a recent issue of the magazine.

His plea for ships Willkie gave as "a practical, specific plan," in reply to Lindbergh's request for plans.

He declared that "we will not have peace merely because politicians shout peace or as an answer to our great desire. Neither you nor I nor the President nor Mr. Lindbergh will decide the matter. The question or peace or war will be decided by Mr. Adolf Hitler, and he will answer that question as suits his best interests, irrespective of what we do."

"The totalitarian method of government, of production, of economics and trade will dominate the world tomorrow, or else the democratic method of free men, free enterprise, enlarged trade areas and high standards of living is going to rule," Willkie continued.

"We cannot escape this struggle by locking ourselves within our boundaries, living on defeatism, negation and isolation . . ."

Beaverbrook Made Production Chief

craft production, which is Lord Beaverbrook's old job; Leathers as minister of shipping and transport; Col. J. J. Llewellin as parliamentary secretary for the ministry of transport, and Frederick Montague as parliamentary secretary of the ministry of aircraft production.

Ronald H. Cross was named to the post of high commissioner in Australia for the United Kingdom. Cross used to be shipping minister. He is well known in Australia and is being sent there because it is now a critical necessity to keep the empire happy and well supplied. Col. Moore-Brabazon is an old friend of Churchill and succeeds Beaverbrook in the important job of aircraft production superintendence. It is important to Americans in this respect: The ministry of aircraft production has charge of ferrying American-produced planes over the ocean and is the liaison agency between this continent and America.

Beaverbrook

Even more important is the new appointment to the shipping and transport ministry. It was in transport that former War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha came to grief, and it is on the handling of shipping that this island's fate now depends to a large extent. Putting two under one heading, as is done by the new appointment, means that the same ministry will be responsible for getting goods across the ocean and also for getting them unloaded so that ships can be quickly released for New York.

This has become one of the toughest jobs open to anybody in the empire and the minister in this job will either rise or fall with the up or down grade of sinkings.

Leathers, who now takes over this critical job, is virtually unknown. He has been serving as adviser on coal in the ministry of shipping. In this capacity he has directed shipments of coal from port to port all over the world in order to meet exigencies as they have arisen. He has been one of Britain's bright young men, coming up from an industrial background, and although he is still young he is a director of William Cory & Sons, Ltd., and is a director in many enterprises scattered around the world.

The Gallup Poll

Majority of Voters Would Not Favor War Even If U. S. Battleship Were Sunk

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., May 1.—A question uppermost in the minds of many Americans today is what will happen if an American warship is sunk by German submarines in the course of patroling the neutrality zone, or possibly in the course of convoying ships to Britain.

Would this make the country want to get into a "shooting" war with Germany?

Many who have opposed convoys have argued that the sinking of a warship would inflame public opinion to the point where the country would demand war. To try to discover in advance how likely this would be, the American Institute of Public Opinion has conducted a Nation-wide study of sentiment at the present time on this important question.

The results indicate that the majority would not be in favor of going to war even if American ships were sunk.

Two questions were put to voters in the study—one dealing with sinking of warships, and the other with sinking of merchant ships, with the following results:

"If the United States navy is used to guard merchant ships crossing the Atlantic, and some of our warships are sunk by German submarines, would you be in favor of going to war against Germany?"

Yes	40%
No	50
No opinion	10

"If the United States sends merchant ships to Britain with war materials, and some of them are sunk by German submarines, would you be in favor of going to war against Germany?"

Yes	34%
No	58
No opinion	8

Of course the exact circumstances of any sinking—the place where it occurred, the number of lives lost and other factors—might alter opinion at the time the incident occurred. But the interesting fact is that, as of today, one-half of the country's voters say they wouldn't want to get into a "shooting" war even if a warship is sunk. The number is even larger—58 per cent—in the case of the sinking of a merchant ship.

The majority argument in both instance—as revealed in an analysis of reasons given by voters—is that the country would naturally expect trouble and would discount in advance the importance of any sinking. The predominant feeling is expressed in the typical comment:

"We should not blame Germany if she tried to sink those ships. That's the risk we incur. That is the natural consequence. It would be hard luck, but what else could we expect?"

Among those who think the country should go to war over ship-sinking, the predominant feeling is that "the country could not just sit by and watch its ships being sunk; we'd have to protect the flag."

Admiral Calls For Convoys If Necessary

Copyright by New York Times

New York, May 1.—Going further than any ranking naval official has done so far, Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commandant of the Third Naval District, today called for the use of American convoys, if necessary to insure the delivery of lend-lease aid to Britain. Speaking at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon here, Admiral Andrews coupled his declaration with a warning that America must fight for its way of life.

The admiral's reference to the possibility of convoys was followed by an outburst of applause.

"When international morality breaks down, as at present, a policeman is needed, just as when a disturbance occurs in our neighborhood block a policeman is called, and when he is needed he must be able to cross the street," he said. "Likewise, now that Great Britain needs our help, we must be able to deliver the aid, not sit by and watch our materials rotting on docks for lack of ships, or sent to the bottom of the sea.

"Unless we supply ships, planes and material to Great Britain sufficiently fast and in sufficient quantity, her cause may be lost. Every single activity under my command in this area is working day and night, not only in building ships for our fleet, but also in repairing British ships and in supplying material aid to England. We have been criticized for wanting to keep our 'business as usual' signs out. We must be able to get out a new sign, 'business booming,' in order to supply beleaguered England.

"That's only half the job. We must make this potential aid an aid in fact by insuring its delivery.

"Gentlemen, if that means convoys, then we must convoy. Otherwise we might as well resign ourselves to England's defeat and start preparing for a life struggle for America itself—alone.

"Should England fall where are your ships of commerce? One need only look at the Normandie laid up in North River, to have the answer. We would have to surrender our world trade, if only temporarily, and start fighting the most difficult uphill comeback in history. But as Col. Frank Knox said last week, 'We won't surrender and we will fight.'"

In the Salum area the British reported their patrols were active and had inflicted casualties and damage on the enemy.

The R. A. F. reported heavy casualties were suffered by Axis troops machine-gunned by low-diving attacks on a convoy of 100 motor trucks discovered in the Gambut area of Libya. Thirty of the trucks were carrying troops, and twenty "bust into flame" the communique said.

One German plane was shot down and two were damaged in desert dogfights.

On the East African front the official war bulletin said 5,500 Italians, 2,400 colonial troops, 93 guns and uncounted other equipment had been taken at Dessie, Ethiopia, by South African forces.

50,000 Nazis Reported in Libya

New York, May 1 (AP).—The Hungarian radio, heard tonight by N. B. C., said reports received in Budapest indicated there now were 50,000 German troops in Libya.

Arnold Back, Praises British

New York, May 1.—Returning from a brief mission in London aboard the Pan American Airways Yankee Clipper today, Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, lauded the morale of the English people and the quality of their leadership and declared that there was no sentiment in England for peace at this time.

He declined to discuss the military situation there.

Gen. Arnold, who is also deputy chief of staff of the Army for air, left for London April 10. He was accompanied on the return trip by Brig. Gen. Martin Scanlon, who has been air attache at the American Embassy in London for five years; Maj. Elwood R. Quesada, Gen. Arnold's aide, and David Carnegie, a British subject and former officer of the Royal Flying Corps, who is here to observe aviation training courses.

A group of Army officers met them, and the party left soon after in an Army transport plane for Bolling Field, Washington, where Gen. Arnold will report to the War Department.

Before he departed, Gen. Arnold said, he had an audience with King George, whom he described as "a very charming and delightful gentleman," he said of Prime Minister Winston Churchill:

"I think that England is very fortunate in having a man of Mr. Churchill's caliber available for that position at this time when she is facing such a crisis in her history."

"British morale is very high," he said, adding that he was very favorably impressed with the way the English went back to work even after the worst bombing raids.

Air Lines Turn Over Planes For Britain

American aviators and air lines will deliver to the Government within three days "a substantial" number of civilian transport planes for dispatch to the democracies under the lease-lend program, Secretary of Commerce Jones advised President Roosevelt last night.

Between 20 and 30 two-motored planes were understood to be on the way to Eastern ports for transfer to Britain. Some possibly may go to China. They will be used for troop carrying and are not to be converted into military planes.

Only a few days ago, the President asked Secretary Jones to make a survey to determine how many transport planes could be spared for the lease-lend program. Jones made his report in a brief letter to the Chief Executive. The survey was conducted by the Civil Aeronautics Administration, which is in the Commerce Department.

Jones letter said:

"Dear Mr. President:

"I have your letter of the 29th, requesting that I arrange to secure from the air transport industry and from private owners a substantial number of planes of transport type for allocation by you to the democracies under the Lease-Lend Act.

"I am pleased to advise that we have contacted the principal air line officials and owners of private planes, and, without exception, they have indicated a willingness to comply with your request.

"A substantial number of planes will be delivered within the next three days."

Alabama Governor Expects to Cut Taxes

Montgomery, Ala., May 1 (U.P.).—A change of pace, and a welcome one to the Alabama taxpayer who has been reading the proposals for increased Federal levies to finance part of the defense program:

Gov. Frank Dixon announced State Finance Director A. R. Forsyth had figured that Alabama income taxes would yield a surplus fund, a "free balance,' of $1,510,088 by September 30, 1941, and $3,051,600 by September 30, 1942. The Governor planned to use the surplus to reduce ad valorem taxes.

Senate Would Repay Vermont Loan of 1812

A trifle tardily, the Senate yesterday approved a $92,868 claim by Vermont for funds that State advanced to finance the War of 1812.

The delay arose from the fact that certain records were lost in a fire in 1857. The House must still act on the claim.

Veteran, 72, Child, 2, Do Their Bit at Defense Bond Sale

10c FOR DEFENSE—Betty Jean Dobbs, 2, does her bit for national defense by buying 10 cents worth of postal savings stamps from James L. Hudson at the City Postoffice. Mrs. Claude Dobbs, 111 Third Street Northwest, took her daughter there

Brisk Business Reported as D. C. Rushes for Securities

"For us and for America" they dug out their savings yesterday—a grizzled veteran of World War I and a 2-year-old, the man in overalls and the society matron.

They dug it out at postoffices and banks, here and throughout the Nation; in dimes, and quarters and half-dollars; in $50, $100 and $1,000 bills.

The greatest Government borrowing program since 1917 was getting under way.

To President Roosevelt's plea that Americans "demonstrate again your faith in America," the response of the Capital was typical of that of the country.

As at 31 postoffices here, and 51 banks, they "put it on the line" for their own security and that of their country at 16,000 postoffices and uncounted banks from coast to coast.

The District Postoffice reported that in the four hours between 8 a. m. and 1 p. m. (the latest tabulation) the Central Postoffice and 30 branches sold $37,000 worth of savings stamps to banks, and themselves sold $2,000 worth of stamps, and $25,000 in bonds.

In New York City more than $1,000,000 worth of stamps and bonds were sold, meanwhile, and there were sell-outs in several other cities, the Treasury reported while refusing to name which communities were involved. But statistics told only half the story.

Seventy-five-year-old John W. Hunefeld, a house painter of 225 C Street Northeast, who every year since 1924 has headed the New Year's Day line at the White House, scored another "first" yesterday. He waited more than a hour to be the first Washingtonian after President Roosevelt (who made the country's initial bond purchase Wednesday) to participate in the new program.

Later at the Central Postoffice, First Lieut. Oscar Lottig, 72, U. S. A., retired, stepped up and flipped ten $100 bills and one $50 on the counter.

"Sure I'm putting it on the line" remarked white-haired Lottig, who rose through the ranks in four wars to an Army commission, then retired in 1924 after 32 years service.

Answering a question, he admitted: "Yes, I fought in Cuba, and the Philippines and Mexico besides the last one. But there's no use talking about those. There's another one going on right now."

Next in line after Lottig was Betty Jean Dobbs, blonde and 2, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Claude Dobbs, of 111 Third Street Northeast.

"Come on, honey, hand your dime to the man," Mrs. Dobbs urged. Then, "You see, I'm starting one of those books for her. Of course she may not know much about savings or national defense either, yet . . ."

Then came Miss Katherine Hill, 19, who moved last week to this city from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., also armed with a dime. She has a job starting today at the White Motor Co., 1120 First Street Northeast.

"For me or defense? For both today," she smiled.

A well-dressed woman at another window, who requested her name be withheld, also had a lucid explanation: "Yes, practically everyone is anxious to help foot the bill for all this defense effort. But you don't have to be smug about it. If you have money kicking around why not put it where you can do that and get a return on it at the same time."

The overalled man behind her nodded.

Cotton Price 'Ceiling' Is Threatened

Unless prices for combed cotton yarn, basic item in major cotton textile materials, are reduced from their current "fictitious levels," ceiling prices will be imposed and frozen by the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, its administrator, Leon Henderson, warned yesterday.

At the same time, Henderson revoked the ceiling prices on soft coal, which he had imposed only for the strike emergency.

In a letter to Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, Henderson yesterday also denied charges that he had taken "discriminatory action" against farm prices and gave assurance that he supported the Administration's farm program objectives, in correcting too low agricultural income. He warned, however, that if there were speculative advances in farm product prices, he would take "action," but "with the speculator, rather than the farmer, in mind."

Meets With Spinners' Group

The threat of mandatory price ceilings for cotton yarn was made to a group of spinners who had met with Henderson on his "invitation" after reports of excessive price rises.

The OPACS said Henderson "emphasized his disinclination to impose any form of mandatory control except as a last resort," and stated that presently adequate productive capacity, plus rest, it and good judgment, should be sufficient safeguards against dangerously rising prices.

The importance of the warning, it was said, lies in the widespread use of combed cotton yarn in a large variety of cottton cloth filling not only defense requirements, but also the needs of the average consumer.

In revoking the coal price ceiling, Henderson clearly indicated, however, that he would "promptly" reinstate price limits if unreasonable prices are charged for coal in the future. He also asked persons who thought themselves affected by "any unreasonable price increases" to communicate with him.

Henderson's statement on farm price policy was in answer to recent charges of Representative Cannon that the price administrator had singled out agricultural commodities as the only ones to be sold below parity.

In a flat denial, Henderson said that he had concurred with steps taken by the Secretary of Agriculture to give farmers a long term price guarantee for pork, dairy and poultry products, principally as a measure to stimulate production, with the Government, rather than the farmer, underwriting the risk of "expansion of capacity," just as in industrial plant expansion efforts.

He added that this was not a price-fixing measure, and that so far he had taken no steps to put ceilings on farm prices. Instead, he said, he had acted to forestall increases in farm costs.

"It has always been my feeling," Henderson concluded, "that the long years of farm disparity following the last war were partly the result of inflationary advances in farm prices and farm costs during the war period. The farmers' prices fell after the war was over, while his costs, his debt load and his inteest charges remained high and inflexible. He was left in the vise. To avoid a recurrence of this situation is one of my jobs."

Kreisler 'Not So Good'

New York, May 1 (INS).—Fritz Kreisler, 66-year-old violinist who was injured seriously when hit by a truck last Saturday, suffered a relapse today. A bulletin issued at the hospital, where he has been in a semiconscious state since the accident, said his condition is "not so good."

President Gets Three Billion Naval Measure

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Congress sent to the White House yesterday a record-breaking Navy supply bill, carrying $3,415,521,750 for speeding completion of the two-ocean fleet and maintaining the naval establishment next year.

The Senate voted approval of a conference report previously adopted by the House which provides $1,515,000,000 for carrying on construction of 729 ships of all types and $292,000,000 for modernizing existing ships of the fleet, acquiring additional supply vessels and arming merchantmen.

Funds are included in the measure for raising the strength of the Navy to 258,000 men and 28,120 officers, while the Marine Corps will be boosted to 50,566 men and 3,650 officers.

A total of $434,550,000 is allowed for naval aviation, including $350,372,000 for payments on 7,129 planes on order. More than half of the $144,000,000 included for shore facilities will go toward building new air bases to handle some of the 10,000 airplanes the Navy expects to have when aircraft on order are delivered.

The funds in the bill provide for completing during the next fiscal year two cruisers, 14 destroyers and eight submarines. No major additions are planned under the measure to the two-fleet Navy under construction, but it does provide for starting work on additional "mosquito" boats and sub chasers.

Under the fleet modernization program contemplated under the bill major alterations are planned for five battleships, two aircraft carriers and three submarines, besides strengthening all ships of the fleet against air attack.

Congress wrote into the bill a modified "buy-American" restriction under which the Navy may purchase Argentine canned beef and other foreign products where domestic articles of satisfactory quality cannot be obtained at reasonable prices.

Manila, May 1 (AP).—Departure of the steamship President Pierce for the United States was delayed an hour tonight while Hermann Vogel, 26, identified by police as a German national, battled two immigration officers and seven policemen in attempting to avoid deportation as an undesirable alien.

Vogel finally was subdued and placed aboard ship. He will be removed by immigration authorities when the vessel reaches San Francisco.

Strike Called At G. M. Plane Wire Plant

By the Associated Press

There were numerous difficulties yesterday to concern officials charged with ironing out labor difficulties.

One of these was a walkout by C. I. O. electrical workers at the Packard electrical division of General Motors, Warren, Ohio. The concern, with nearly 1,600 employes, is a major producer of wire for the aircraft industry. A union spokesman said the dismissal of 156 workers was regarded as a "lockout." The management said a shortage of materials caused the dismissals.

A strike of C. I. O. utility employes in five eastern Ohio counties was threatened at midnight tonight in an effort to win 20 cents an hour wage increases and other concessions from the Ohio Power Co. The union said 39 major industries, at least 20 of them with defense contracts, would be affected, but that it was planned, in event of a strike, to maintain essential public services. Rates of pay, it said, now range from 36 to 95 cents an hour.

The Midland Steel Products Co., Cleveland, manufacturers of automobile frames, was idle due to a walkout Wednesday of C. I. O.-U. A. W. employes because, union officials said, of the company's failure to insist that new employes join the union. The company has about 1,400 production employes.

A C. I. O. electrical union began picketing the Monroe Calculating Machine Co.'s plant at Orange, N. J., which employs 700. The union asked a union shop and 10 cents an hour wage increases.

About 500 employes of the General American Transportation Co.'s plant at Masury, Ohio, walked out in a strike called by the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee. Union officials said the principal complaint was that a wage increase of 10 cents an hour, granted Wednesday, was not made retroactive to April1.

At Portage, Wis., 200 production workers returned to their jobs at the Portage Hosiery Co. after a two-week strike. They received wage increases of 10 cents an hour and 15 per cent for piece work.

Argentine to Speak At Pan American Union

Dr. Enrique de Gandia, Argentine historian, will lecture in Spanish tonight at 8:30 at the Pan American Union on "The Birth, Death and Resurrection of Buenos Aires." Editor of El Monitor de la Educacion Comun," Dr. Gandia is author of 50 historical works and monographs, and is one of 30 Latin Americans visiting the United States on invitation of the State Department.

Latin-American Navy Heads Arrive

New York, May 1 (INS).—Latin-American naval chiefs began streaming into the United States tonight for conferences on coordination of hemisphere defense.

Invitations to send the naval chief of staff and one aide were issued by Admiral Stark to all Western Hemisphere republics to the south of the United States which have existing navies, and all accepted. Represented at these conferences will be Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Ecuador, Mexico, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela.

First delegations to reach the United States were those of Chile, Peru and Ecuador, who traveled on the Pan American Airways stratoclipper reaching Miami tonight. Delegations from Colombia, Venezuela, Cuba and Mexico will arrive tomorrow, and the rear guard from Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay and the Argentine will come in Saturday.

N.A.M. Reports Many Defense Tools Are Idle

Untapped sources of machine tools, prime bottleneck of the defense program, were revealed in the initial report of the National Association of Manufacturers Survey of Production Facilities, presented yesterday to OPM Director William S. Knudsen.

The survey, which covered some 18,000 "small to medium" industrial concerns not included in the War and Navy Deprtments census of 20,000 major plants, showed that of the 434,000 machine tools listed in these smaller plants, 157,000, or approximately one-third of the total, were idle an average of 14 hours a day.

N. A. M. officials declined to estimate as to the percentage of coverage involved by the voluntary registration plan under which the census was taken, or to say what proportion of manufacturing concerns, employing between 12 to 500 workers, was represented by the 18,000 listed. In some States, however, they estimated that the coverage was between 90 and 100 per cent.

33% Willing to Aid

Of these plants, the data showed, 28 per cent already were engaged in defense production and an additional 33 per cent of the total specifically expressed their willingness to produce defense items.

Another significant finding, indicating possibilities for increased production, was that of 10,719 firms reporting on operating shifts, 72 per cent worked only one shift and only 9 per cent said they were working the three or four-shift maximum.

Chief value of the survey, according to Walter D. Fuller, N. A. M. president, is the availability to the OPM, Army, Navy and other defense agencies, as well as to important defense contractors, of data on a regional basis showing the existence of machine tools, labor, floor space and the like which might be used in subcontracts for smaller defense work.

The questionnaires, Fuller added, show number and types of machine tools, their availability for defense work, and their location, the man power available, and status of training programs.

Because the data for each plant is transferred to punch cards, defense agencies can quickly muster the roll of available tools and facilities in any given area, Fuller said.

The survey also showed that almost 5,000 plants claimed to be able to expand their skilled labor force, presumably as a result of their own or cooperating training programs, in three months without having to hire additional labor from outside. Almost 3,000 of the plants covered have various training programs, the census showed.

New Ford Plant Starts Pouring Magnesium

Detroit, May 1 (AP).—Although construction of the Ford Motor Co.'s magnesium foundry is far from completed, pouring of the silver-white metallic element, vital to the national defense, already is under way at the River Rouge plant.

Ford is expending approximately $1,000,000 in redesigning a section of his main foundry building, the installation of a series of furnaces, mold and core-making equipment, conveyor lines and other machinery to create what is described as the largest magnesium foundry in the world.

Megnesium has the characteristics of being unusually light—its atomic weight is 24.32 compared with 27.1 for aluminum—and tough. The castings being made of an alloy consisting of 6 to 9 per cent aluminum, 1½ to 3 per cent zinc and the remainder magnesium are to be used by Ford in the airplane engine factory in which he will build Pratt & Whitney aviation engines for the United States Army.

German Guns Again Shell Dover Area

By the Associated Press.

London, May 1.—German guns on the French coast briefly shelled the Dover area again tonight as bad visibility apparently kept Nazi air activity to a minimum.

The shelling began shortly after 6 p. m. in the same region where a 7-hour bombardment Tuesday led some Britons to believe an early invasion attempt might be contemplated.

Tonight the guns fell silent after two salvos, however.

Despite stormy weather, particularly over the continent, the British air ministry reported that strong R. A. F. bomber forces conducted overnight attacks on the German naval base at Kiel, on Hamburg's industrial center, on the port of Emden and on targets in the Berlin area. One British plane failed to return and another was lost in daylight attacks Wednesday on shipping off the Dutch coast and on an island radio station off Norway.

German operations Wednesday night were slight, the British declared, only a few planes crossing the northeast coast.

In a report on April offensive and defensive operations, the British said Germany had lost 113 planes and Britain 106, both being mostly bombers. Eighty-seven of the German losses were in night raids, the summary stated.

British figures since the start of the war listed 3,306 German planes destroyed in or around Britain, 863 British planes lost in the same area, and 594 British planes lost in raids on the continent.

The air ministry news service said 70 Emden houses were destroyed and 130 others damaged by one of Britain's "beautiful" new bombs.

Quoting reports from the German port, the service said the destructive power of the explosives was so great that after one raid the usual boarding up of damaged properties to conceal the damage could not be carried out.

"A bomb which fell near the postoffice turned the whole quarter, with exception of the postoffice, into a heap of ruins," the news service added.

Even a wing of the postoffice was smashed, it said, while houses 500 yards from the explosion had their window frames and parts of their roofs blown away.

Bill Would Increase RFC Borrowing Power

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, introduced yesterday a bill to increase borrowing power of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by $1,500,000,000 to meet national defense needs.

He said he offered it at the request of RFC officials.

The measure also would extend the life of two other Government lending corporations, the Disaster Loan Corporation and Electric Home and Farm Authority, until June 30, 1947. Both would terminate under present law on June 30 next.

Lindbergh Always Opposed Action Against Nazis, Briton Says

By the Associated Press

London, May 1.—R. A. Butler, undersecretary of foreign affairs, answered "yes" in the House of Commons today to a member who asked him whether Charles A. Lindbergh had not "consistently, always used his influence to prevent effective action against Germany."

His questioner was a Conservative member, S. V. T. Adams.

The brief discussion involving Lindbergh brought a statement from Butler that the American flier's views on the strength of the Soviet Union about the time of the Munich Pact in September, 1938, were considered of "no undue significance" by the British government.

The House cheered this declaration.

Butler refused to answer Laborite Ellis Smith's query whether Lindbergh had used his influence "along with a well-known lady member of this House."

Also responding to a question, Butler said records showed that Lindbergh's views were available for the government's consideration. Asked, however, whether Lindbergh ever had been interviewed by the foreign office, the undersecretary answered, "not so far as I am aware."

Clement R. Attlee, lord privy seal who often acts as Prime Minister Churchill's lieutenant on the Commons floor, promised the House he would arrange the fullest possible information on the Battle of the Atlantic

This was part of his affirmative answer to Liberal Geoffrey Mander's question:

"Can we be assured fuller information is going to be given in view of the fact that up to now, practically nothing has been said as to whether supplies which have been so generously sent from American will reach these shores or not?"

Butler said Britain hopes for frustration of what he called German plans for penetration of the Iberian Peninsula and that Spaniards and Portuguese will "be spared the miseries of war."

In a written reply to a question, he added that rumors of intended British intervention with the object of involving Spain and Portugal in the war were put out by German propaganda agencies to stir up anti-British feeling.

Pool Resources, Dr. Quo Urges Democracies

Copyright by New York Times

New York, May 1.—The United States, Britain and China must pool their economic and natural resources in a powerful, democratic combination if the threat of totalitarian-controled world is to be defeated, Dr. Quo Tai-chi, newly-appointed Chinese foreign minister, declared here tonight at a dinner in his honor.

Holding that the Chinese republic represented this country' first line of defense on the Pacific, Dr. Quo called upon America and Britain to do everything possible to help China strengthen its defenses against Japanese aggression, particularly in the southern Pacific region.

"The destiny of America and Britain on both land and sea is inextricably bound up with China's ability to prevent the extension and consolidation of Japanese imperialism in the Pacific area," Dr. Quo told more than 500 members of five Chinese societies, who sponsored the dinner.

Urges Embargo on Oil to Japan

Dr. Quo, who was formerly the Chinese ambassador to England and is resigning from London to assume his new post in the Chinese Nationalist government, expressed his nation's gratitude for the aid that the Chinese have been receiving from this country since the Japanese invasion.

He declared that during the four-year struggle with Japan, China had succeeded in holding its enemy at bay and had "bogged down a million of Japanese soldiers in China's endless fronts."

"I plead with the people of America," he said, "that you should cease to supply Japan with war materials, particularly oil, which have enabled the Japanese soldiers and airplanes to maim and kill our women and children and destroy our homes and factories."

For "a Better World Order"

In urging a general pooling of resources by the three democracies, Dr. Quo said:

"It must be patent to all that the paramount problem before us today is the manner and method of cooperation between America, Britain and China. This ABC combination should not only aim at the formation of a united spiritual front but should be the pooling of all of our economic and natural resources.

"That we stand or fall may depend upon our penetrating understanding of the real issues involved and above all upon our courage to act and to act quickly. This ABC combination which I speak of should be and is a friendship founded on our common concern for the preservation of the civilized way of life, for the joint defense of our cherished freedom, and for the reconstruction of a better world order."

First Lady Hints Lindbergh Should Return Nazi Medal

Eugene, Oreg., May 1 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told reporters last night that "if I had received a medal from Hitler, as Col. Charles A. Lindbergh did, I would have returned it long ago. Of course, what Lindbergh does with the medal is his affair."

She said no one was trying to deny the flier freedom of speech, but that when "someone says that the democracies cannot possibly win this war, anyone has a perfect right to compare that person with certain factions in American history."

New Officers of U. S. Chamber of Commerce

Roosevelt Asks Panama Road Funds

Congress was asked by President Roosevelt yesterday to provide funds for completing a 1,550-mile stretch of the Inter-American Highway — a Western Hemisphere "Burma Road" to link, by land, the United States and its strategic Panama Canal Zone.

The highway, like its counterpart in China, would cut through the thick jungle and over the rugged mountains of six nations—Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Panama.

The President asked Congress to authorize a $20,000,000 appropriation for completing the road from the southern Mexican border to the Canal and sent with his message a report by Secretary Hull which said, among other things, that the War and Navy Departments believed the highway would be of "real value from the standpoint of the defense of the Caribbean area."

Such an all-year highway, Hull said, also would give the governments of the countries through which it passed "materially more effective control over any attempted subversive activities within their borders."

Beyond the defense aspects, Hull enumerated various economic possibilities of the road.

Chairman Bloom (Democrat), of New York, of House Foreign Affairs Committee, told reporters:

"There is no question, but that it should be done as quickly as possible. It will show that we of the United States are willing to do everything possible to establish closer relations with those nations."

Hull said this Government had reached the conclusion that the highway could not be completed "in the foreseeable future" unless this country assumed a substantial part of the cost. He recommended that the United States spend $5,400,000 in the first year and slightly less than $4,000,000 yearly for the next four years.

The 1,550 miles of construction which would be undertaken would represent about half of the mileage from the United States to Panama, the remainder existing in comparatively short but unconnected stretches of existing highway.

The ultimate goal is a 12,000-mile route from the United States to Argentina.

ones who will be squeezed most seriously—fixed incomes, tripled tax liabilities, increased living costs.

"Is 'liquidation' of our middle class to come?"

Alvord declared that there was nothing in logic or common sense to justify paying for the defense program on the basis of two-thirds tax and one-third borrowing. In the World War, he said, the bill was paid by one-third taxes and two-thirds borrowing.

He demanded that nondefense expenditures be cut to the bone, and he estimated that $2,000,000,000 could be pared from the budget in that way.

Besides Mr. Hawkes, named as president, six vice presidents, representing different sections, were elected yesterday by the chamber's board of directors. They were:

Northeastern division, George S. Hawley, of Bridgeport, Conn., president of the Bridgeport Gas Light Co.; Southeastern division, Clem D. Johnston, of Roanoke, Va., president of the Roanoke Public Warehouse; North Central division, Thomas S. Hammond, of Harvey, Ill., president of the Whiting Corporation; Northwestern division, J. N. Tate, of St. Paul, Minn., vice president of the Weyerhaeuser Sales Co.; Southwestern division, James F. Owens, Oklahoma City, Okla., president of the Oklahoma Gas & Electric Co.; Western division, Earl A. Johnston, Spokane, Wash., president of the Johnston Investment Co.

D. C. Man Named Treasurer

Robert V. Fleming, of this city, president, and chairman of the board of the Riggs National Bank, was elected treasurer, and John W. O'Leary, of Chicago and Washington, was named chairman of the executive committee.

The chamber at its final business meeting adopted 18 resolutions, then pledged business leaders to give "right of way all down the line" to arms production. Another called on industry and labor to agree on a "moratorium" against disputes which would interfere with operations on defense industries.

The twenty-ninth meeting of the chamber ended with a banquet last night in the Willard Hotel. James S. Kemper, the outgoing president, presided. The Rev. John Watson Christie, D. D. of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Wilmington, Del., said the invocation.

W. Gibson Carey, Jr., president of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Co., of New York, one of the two banquet orators, said that there had been a "startling" similarity of trends in the United States and fallen France.

"We must at all costs avoid in the United States the disaster of France," he said. "I do not speak of that nation with disparagement, for I revere its magnificent history and feel deep pity for its present plight. Is it not true that France lost her way in a world requiring strength as a prerequisite to existence? And what were the causes of the decay in France? Was it not divided by class consciousness, plagued by bureaucrats and overburdened by taxes and debt

"Did it not emphasize the division of wealth, rather than its production? Had it not, as a state, undertaken the support and security of its citizens rather than leaving this basic function to productive enterprise? And finally, in its hour of trial, did it conceive of its dangers? Perhaps, but it was too late. Too late even to develop a patriotic self-discipline sufficient to avoid strikes in airplane factories when Germany was at the very gates of Paris."

Messenger on Bicycle Is Injured by Auto

Joseph Seweal, 19-year-old postal Telegraph bicycle messenger, was taken to Emergency Hospital with a possible fracture of his right leg last night after he was struck by a car at Fifteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest. Driver of the car, Frank C. Weems, 3826 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, was not held, police said.

Indictments Of Nazi News Service Upheld

Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday sustained the legality of indictments charging Transocean News Service and two of its officials with failing to register as Nazi propagandists.

Justice Letts ruled after an all-day hearing in the District Court, in which Attorney Leo A. Rover, counsel for the German concern, repeatedly sought to explore proceedings of the grand jury which returned the indictments. Upheld by Justice Letts, Government attorneys blocked every effort to penetrate the secrecy of the grand jury room.

The 23 members of the grand jury were called as witnesses, but were excused after Justice Letts declined to hear the testimony of the first one placed on the stand. He was John J. Whelan, 2537 Wakeside Drive Northwest.

Accused besides the news service are Dr. Manfred Zapp, its American manager, and his chief, Guenther Tonn.

Rover contends that the Germans were indicted on the basis of papers which had been unlawfully seized by two Dies Committee agents, George F. Hurley and Stephen Birmingham. Both agents testified that Dr. Zapp willingly gave them the documents.

Miss Siri Lehwald, Zapp's chic, brunette secretary, said Zapp's employes wrapped up the papers for the Dies agents, but explained that this was because "Dr. Zapp is courteous to everybody."

Zapp and Tonn said they did not give up the incriminating documents willingly but because they thought they were required to do so by a Dies Committee subpena.

Rover was assisted by Attorneys Emil Moreani, jr., and Daniel F. Cohalan, jr., New York.

Thousands Open Folk Festival

have somewhat the excitement of a combined circus day and a spring vacation. Their favorites remain the Kiowa Indians who romped through traditional dances to the beat of a big drum, the jingle of leg bells and the swaying of elaborate feather headdresses and breast ornaments. Following them two Mexican youths took the rhythmic dances and songs of the Mayans.

The "pageantry" of the festival—and it has profound interest for archivists and scholars, as well as being colorful entertainment—was set by the costumes worn for the dancing of the Indians, and the primitive body rhythms, almost angular in their swift sharpness, of the Haitians.

These visitors brought to Washington by their President-elect, Elie Lescot, perform their primitive dances with little cognizance of their audience. Percussion thunders of their wooden drums and gourd rattles seem to induce a spell which communicates itself to those on the other side of the footlights.

The agile youths from the School of Organic Education in Alabama, handsome and husky youngsters from the Tennessee mountains, and the Pigeon Valley square dancers from North Carolina; the fiddle bands from Virginia and Arkansas, the prize-winner square dance team from the Cowboys' Reunion of Stamford, Tex.; French folk singers and dancers from Chicago, were all on the program again, and found themselves with many old friends in Washington.

For complete loveliness of picture and motion the Mexican girls of the Jarabe Dance Group, from Pasadena, proved a notable new feature of both of yesterday's programs. At the closing number, "Songs the Soldiers Sing" had the audience on its feet as the choristers from Fort Myer—Arlington Cantonment, and the Washington Provisional Brigade marched to the stage.

Day Set So New Citizens Can Celebrate

New Citizens Day, a demonstration of loyalty and respect by new Americans, will be celebrated on May 18 with a patriotic program in the Interdepartmental Auditorium, it was announced yesterday.

More than a score of organizations will participate, said Souren H. Hanessian, vice president of the Americanization School Association and chairman of the arrangements committee.

According to tentative plans for the program, Solicitor General Francis Biddle will give the principal address; Frederic A. Delano, uncle of President Roosevelt and president of the Americanization School Association, will preside, and many of the approximately 1,000 men and women who have received their final papers in District Court in the last year will attend.

The following groups are cooperating in the local celebration, one of many which will be held in cities throughout the country:

Americanization School Association, American Legion Americanism Commission, American Legion Auxiliary, Adult Education Association of D. C., Argo Lodge of the B'nai B'rith and its auxiliary, B. P. O. Elks, citizenship branch of the Americanization School Association, Civitan Club, Council of Jewish Women.

Also the D. A. R. Americanism Committee, Federation of Citizens Associations, I Am an American Committee, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Kiwanis Club, Lions Club, Travelers Aid, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., District Bar Association and Junior Bar Association, Celebration of New Citizens Day is by proclamation of President Roosevelt.

Husband Tells Court Wife Lent Him to Another for $10,000

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, May 1.—The story of how a woman allegedly loaned her husband to another woman for $10,000 and promised him half, came to light today as he asked for his share in a suit for divorce.

Samuel Brummel, insurance salesman, sued Mrs. Lillian Brummel on grounds of desertion. She has filed a cross-complaint alleging cruelty and desertion on his part.

Identified in the divorce case as the woman who assertedly paid $10,000 for the loan of Brummel was Mrs. Norma Brummel, who married him in 1938 after Mrs. Lillian Brummel obtained a Mexican divorce. Last year, however, Mrs. Norma Brummel obtained an annulment on the ground the first Mrs. Brummel's divorce was not legal and that he had been married all along to his first wife. Brummel asks $5,000 from his first wife as his part of the community property.

Brummel detailed how his wife promised to give him half the money after he divorced the second Mrs. Brummel, and continued:

"My wife told me at least 100 times that I was only loaned to her for a year. She would say, 'Remember, I expect you back after one year. I am just loaning you out.'"

Brummel said he married Mrs. Norma Brummel a month after the divorce, but that he lived "under Norma's roof only four weeks."

Asked if he continued to see his wife after he was married to the second, Brummel said:

"Oh, yes; we saw each other right along."

The Brummels had been married 27 years, the husband said, at the time of the Mexican divorce.

Conference Set Today on Folk Traditions

These conferences are a part of the National Folk Festival and will be opened by a paper by June Donahue, extension specialist in community activity at the University of Arkansas, on "The Use of the Folk Traditions in Recreational Work." Joseph W. Yoder, of Huntingdon, Pa., will speak on "Amish Music" and his paper will be illustrated by Pennsylvania Dutch singers.

Other papers to be presented for discussion will be "Virgin Island Lore," by the Rev. Hugh G. Gaffney, S.S.; "Square and Contra Dance in Michigan," with demonstrations of teaching methods, by Grace Ryan, State Teachers College, Mount Pleasant, and discussions on the Negro's contributions to folk art in the United States and its place of Negro folklore in the recreation program will be led respectively by William Pickens, of New York City, representing the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, and Harry K. Parker, of the Windsor Community Center, Greensboro, N. C. Wilson will tell of the work of the Washington Folk Council.

The session tomorrow morning will be presided over by Ben. A. Botkin. Dorothea Lawrence, Plainfield, N. J., will speak on "Folk Music of New Jersey"; Estella T. Weeks, Yonkers, N. Y., on "The Field for Research in Shaker Music"; "The Use of Folklore in Social Settlements" will be the subject of Jennie Cossitt, New York City, and Charles Seeger of the Pan American Union will discuss "The Hazards in Exploitation of Folk Material."

Unique in the record of these folk festival conferences will be a lecture with demonstrations on Haitian folklore, by Mme. Lina Mathon-Fussman of Port-au-Prince. Bascom Lamar Lunsford, of Asheville, N. C., recognized as a foremost authority, will lead a discussion on "The Traditional Ballads and Square Dances in North Carolina."

The conferences are open to the public and there is no admission charge. They are sponsored by The Washington Post Folk Festival Association.

'People vs. Dr. Kildare' Is Film of Wide Variety

Expands Usual Action Beyond Predecessors In Series and Makes New Additions to Cast; Patricia Bowman Headlines the Stage Bill

THERE IS A GREATER VARIETY of subject matter and, at the same time, a deeper and more decisive defense of the medical profession, in "The People vs. Dr. Kildare," than heretofore have characterized these engaging cinematic studies of the doctors, the nurses and the internes and the harried lives they live in a great metropolitan hospital.

BELL

This latest release in the series, revealed yesterday for the first time on a local screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, goes to some pains to make clear that members of the medical profession are not miracle workers—"after all, there was only one Perfect Healer"—but are men so grounded in their profession as to be entitled to a reasonable discretion in what should or should not be done to save a life in a critical emergency. The processes of the drama at first make Dr. Kildare out as a precipitate young tyro who undertook an emergency, roadside operation, following a motor car smashup, without knowing precisely what he was doing and with no surety as to the outcome. The testimony of the venerable Dr. Gillespie, delivered in court in the face of every possible legal barrier, by its profound analysis of what physicians are for and how they are actuated, pretty thoroughly knocks that theory into a cocked hat.

Frances Marlowe is the pivotal character in the action that winds its way through an unaccustomed measure of "comedy relief" to the courtroom scene that provides all of the major developments. She is a professional ice skater, with a brilliant future just opening before her. Rushing to town with her youthful agent, their car collides with a truck and the girl apparently is fatally injured. When Dr. Kildare happens along with Nurse Mary Lamount, he operates on the instant and then sets a compound fracture. Weeks later, it develops that while Miss Marlowe seems otherwise in perfect health, her right leg, when it is removed from the cast, is paralyzed. So the great Blair General Hospital and all of its staff involved find theselves sued for $100,000 for malpractice. That is how we get into court for a large part of the picture.

Some New Additions to Cast

In addition to Dr. Gillespie's typical asperity and Molly Byrd's comparable acerbity in rebuttal to most that he says, "The People vs. Dr. Kildare" takes on a further comedy mood through the presence in the cast of Red Skelton, the old Washington favorite; Chick Chandler, his working mate among the internes, and several others, more or less dragged in by the heels. By that I mean that in its pursuit of its central course, the film frequently detours in favor of extraneous scenes that are amusing but by no means essential to the basic structure of the play. In view of the picture's preponderant merit, this probably is carping.

There is no need at this time to expatiate upon the skill with which Lionel Barrymore and Lew Ayres play the respective roles of Dr. Gillespie and Dr. Kildare; nor is there any to dwell upon Laraine Day, as Nurse Lamount; Alma Kruger, as Molly Byrd, or Walter Kingsford, as the hospital head. They have been tried many times and found true. Bonita Granville, the incorrigible Skelton, Diana Lewis and Paul Stanton and Tom Conway, as the opposing attorneys, are valuable additions to the familiar roster.

Gene Ford's new stage revue at the Capitol is a composite of novelty acts and old favorite stars, with Washington's Patricia Bowman and Arren and Broderick falling into the latter category. "The Hollywood Casinos," one of the most remarkable of dog acts, open the bill. John Gallus combines juggling and musicianship in most amazing fashion and the Rockets also have a novelty bit in their "Charlie McCarthy Number." Miss Bowman's formal ballet and later "Ballet in Swing" are gems. Arren and Broderick are funsters of the first water—in a rowdy sort of way. The "National Music Week" overture, with Lynn Allison singing; Art Brown's stint at the organ and the Fox Movietone News complete three hours of recommended entertainment.

Put Up Strong Defense of Medical Profession

LARAINE DAY, LIONEL BARRYMORE, LEW AYRES
the three pivotal characters, as usual, in "The People Vs. Dr. Kildare," latest release in the popular Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer series, which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Bonita Granville and Red Skelton, Capital favorite, are among the newcomers to the cast of a picture that ranks high on the long list of "Kildares"

New York, May 1.

A NOTED PRODUCER recently met Eleanor Roosevelt for the first time and tried to interest her in the establishment of a National Theater. "In almost every country in Europe, the governments sponsored a national theater and it brought immeasurable benefits to the drama," he told her. "Now you, with your great influence and leadership could help the American theaterfolk, by starting a national theater movement" . . . "Oh, no—I just can't do it," said Mrs. Roosevelt. "I have enough to do right now—arranging so that I don't have to walk through any picket lines."

She reports that of the eight Justices now sitting, six know how to milk a cow.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 1.

The flame of "The Flame of New Orleans" seemed to be only in the minds of the producers. It certainly wasn't on the screen. The story was stretched from a short into a feature picture, or so it seemed.

HOPPER

You've heard about molasses in January? Well, here it is. Rene Clair's direction lacks the zip we demand. Designer Rene Hubert handed the picture to Marlene Dietrich, and such fine and well-loved actors as Andy Devine and Mischa Auer popped up here and there in bit parts. Even Bruce Cabot's virility was used only as a foil for La Dietrich. To me the flame simmered down to a slow burn.

Not since Col. William Hayward marched up Fifth Avenue at the head of his colored regiment after the World War has he been as proud as he is now, looking at his grandson who's named for him, and who is now four weeks old. Little did the Colonel realize then that the mother of that child would be a film star named Margaret Sullavan.

Bill Demarest hasn't been on the radio for years. I finally asked him why, and did I get an earful. Several seasons ago he, Frances Langford, and Guy Lombardo had an airshow. He was nervous about that little mike, and when the producer said "Stand by," he thought it was for rehearsal, instead of which they were going on the air.

They had monkeyed with his script, so he said, "Where in the hell is that joke I wrote?" Just then he saw a man behind a piece of glass put his finger over his mouth. Bill said, "Don't give me the finger, you so-and-so—I want my script!" That was the Alpha and Omega of his radio career.

With the obese practical joker, Alfred Hitchcock, telling them how to do it in "Before the Fact," some of the actors think picture should be titled "Before the Fat!" . . . Gloria Swanson is restless. She's moved three times already.

Ty Power, busier than a one-armed paperhanger going from picture to picture on the Twentieth lot, had a little talk with his boss, Darryl Zanuck, about a summer vacation. The outcome was that Ty gets two vacations tossed into one and he and Annabella will spend three months in Alaska cruising up the coast on a boat Ty's renting.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random: Mitch Leisen's circus revue at the Cocoanut Grove brought out the town. Norma Shearer, very blonde now, looked stunning in a violet gown with eyeshadow the exact shade. Norma was with Jeff Kessel, the writer, in a party with the Charles Boyers and the John Loders; Bill Daniel's tight-rope walking dance had Pat Ziegfeld and her dancer-husband applauding enthusiastically. The "Pink Elephant" shook hands with Gene Markey, Johnny Maschio, Constance Moore, Carmel Myers and Ralph Blum, also at ringside seats. Amusing to see all the elaborately gowned women eating peanuts and popcorn passed out to the crowd: Linda Darnell with Robert Jolley, wore a print dress of green and white carnations and two carnations in her hair. All in all, it was a big night for Mitch, who was presented with a huge pink elephant made of spring blossoms by his gang in the revue.

"Lucky" Humberstone is in the Cedars of Lebanon after his car hit a soft shoulder in Coldwater Canyon and turned over. He was on his way to the studio to direct Sonja Henie in "Sun Valley Serenade" when the accident happened and his friends are worried about his injuries; John Shelton at the Seven Seas with Ronnie Warner, who used to be engaged to Tom Brown; wish I could have made the trip to Santa Barbara to see my favorite son-in-law, King Kennedy with Mary Boland in "Meet the Wife."

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Science of Seismology Rocked By War, Practitioners Told

Earthquake experts here from many parts of the United States yesterday listened sadly as one of their number bemoaned the fact that war is laying havoc with the science of seismology.

Addressing the American Geophysical Union, Capt. N. H. Heck, divisional chief of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, said there is scant hope that the international earthquake report published quarterly at Oxford University can be continued much longer.

This report giving technical information on tremblors occurring in all parts of the world, is the seismologist's "bible."

May Be Last Issue

"The latest issue, which came out recently, may also have been the last," said Capt. Heck, who is president of the International Seismological Association.

The three serious threats against the publication's continued existence are: shutting off of "feeder" information in belligerent countries and those occupied by the Germans; the expense of putting out the quarterly summary and, finally, the raids on England itself.

A surprisingly large number of occupied countries are still sending earthquake data to Oxford but it is too much to hope that they will keep on doing so indefinitely, said Capt. Heck.

Sessions Continue Today

He suggested that the International Seismological Association, Coast and Geodetic Survey and California Institute of Technology cooperate to keep the Oxford "bible" going from the United States, should it die out in England.

"Science Week" in Washington will continue today, with the American Physical Society meeting at the Bureau of Statistics, the American Geophysical Union continuing its sessions at the National Academy of Sciences and the American Mathematical Society opening a two-day session at George Washington University.

House Group Approves Loan Shark Bill

Subcommittee approval of a bill aimed at putting loan sharks out of business here was announced last night by Representative Dan R. McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi.

The bill, indorsed at hearings last week by the District Commissioners and civic leaders, would put small loans under municipal control.

The measure would authorize issuance of licenses to loan companies and limit their interest charges to 2 per cent a month on loans of $500 or less.

As introduced by Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, the bill originally proposed to fix interest charges at 2½ per cent and limit allowable loans to $300 or less. The changes were suggested to the subcommittee by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech.

Under existing law, licensed small loan companies may charge no more than 1 per cent interest. Because, it is claimed, the rate is too low to insure reasonable profit, the business is carried on at present by unlicensed brokers in the city.

Testimony at the hearing also brought out that the present law has fostered the spread of small loan companies in suburban Washington operating under Maryland and Virginia law.

Metal Hoarding Curbs Decreed

designed to relieve what has been reported as excessive hoarding by certain users and overstocking of inventories against a possible future shortage or price rise. The result has been to create artificial scarcities and to intensify one of the defense program's most serious problems, it was said.

The broad plan, one of the most ambitious of the defense program in extent and impact on hundreds of thousands of the country's producers and users, orders customers and suppliers to file affidavits once a month that they have not received or shipped, respectively, amounts of the specified metals which would increase the customers' inventories to unnecessary levels.

The order was addressed to all producers, primary and secondary smelters, resmelters, brokers, warehouse and wholesale distributors and processors and fabricators of the following metals:

Antimony, cadmium, chromium, cobalt, copper, ferrous alloys, all types (includes ferro-tungsten, ferro-manganese); iridium, iron and steel products, including rolled, drawn, forgings, castings and pig iron; lead, manganese or spiegeleisen, mercury, molybdenum, nonferrous alloys, all types (including brass and bronze); tin, vanadium, secondary metals, or scrap, containing any of the metals listed or already subject to control, prepared for sale in order to recover the metal content thereof.

In announcing the plan, Stettinius said it had the "unanimous approval" of industry and Federal agencies concerned. For compliance, he added, the OPM will depend first on the "honor system" under which the monthly affidavits are filed, plus spot checks in the field.

"Industry must realize," he added, "that it is unpatriotic to accumulate unnecessary inventories."

Relying principally on voluntary cooperation, the Government's priorities chief warned that behind his olive branch lay the club of "more drastic action," presumably outright allocations of the metals to each user, and rigid, industry-wide priorities control.

Under the order, no supplier may ship any customer any delivery which the supplier knows or has reason to believe "will effect an increase for any calendar month in inventories . . . in excess of the quantity necessary . . . to meet required deliveries."

In addition, beginning June 10, no supplier may ship to a customer unless the customer has filed with the supplier a sworn statement that his inventory is not in excess of the amounts needed to meet current deliveries.

In cases where the questionnaires show that excessive inventories have already been built up, Stettinius said, further deliveries of the metals will be barred until the stockpile of the customer has been reduced to reasonable levels.

It Was Only Fitting . . .

convene at 10 a. m. today.

In a terse statement following the sessions, board vice chairman William H. Davis told reporters that a policy had been adopted of making no information public during the course of the negotiations.

Besides Davis, who is acting as chairman of the panel, the members are Gerard Swope, chairman of the board of General Electric Co.; Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, both representing the employers' interests; James B. Carey, C. I. O. secretary, and John Brophy, C. I. O. director of industrial union councils, representing labor.

At today's conferences, it was indicated, major officials of the company, who were unable to attend yesterday's meeeting, will be available.

Chief issue of the dispute continues to be the 10-cent hourly wage increase asked by the union, which threatens to call out 160,000 workers in 61 G. M. plants if its demands are not met.

Following a statement Wednesday by G. M. president, that there is "no economic justification" for the huge motor concern to raise its wages, R. J. Thomas, U. A. W. president, and Walter P. Reuther, director of the union's G. M. division, countered with an assertion that the corporation's 'short-sighted and selfish wage policy is a menace to stable labor relations and national defense." They said G. M. "earns the largest profits in the Nation" and thus could 'equal the wage increases which have been granted in recent weeks" by other industries. The reference was prsumably to the 10-cent-an-hour boosts generally granted over the entire steel and steel fabricating industry.

Thomas and Reuther, as well as C. I. O. President Philip Murray, headed the union delegation.

In other board action taken during the day, the new mediation agency set Tuesday as hearing date on the five-week-old strike at the Utica and Mohawk Cotton Mills Co., of Utica, N. Y., and named George Trundle, president of a Cleveland engineering concern, as special expert to investigate issues still in dispute following the termination this week of the strike at two New Jersey plants of John A. Roebling Sons Co.

Settlements announced yesterday were the fifteenth and sixteenth achieved by the board. The Kellog Switchboard dispute was certified to it on April 22, with a strike set for that night. The board persuaded the union workers to delay the strike for the mediation attempt. The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (A. F. L.) and the International Association of Machinists (A. F. L.) had charged the company with failure to bargain in good faith. The unions will meet Tuesday to vote on the settlement, terms of which were not made public. The plant employs 580 men and has contracts for microphones and telephone equipment for the Army Signal Corps.

At Elizabeth, N. J., meanwhile, Phelps-Dodge employes voted to accept a board proposal that they return to work and directly negotiate on the issues of wages and night bonuses.

The strike, called by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (C. I. O.), involved 1,600 men. The company is working on $30,000,000 in direct contracts for copper and brass wiring and tubing while $200,000,000 in defense orders at other plants were said to be affected by the tie-up.

Police-Firemen Bills Ready For Hearings

Increased pay for District police and firemen and shorter hours for firefighters will be considered at public hearings before a Senate District subcommittee, it was learned last night.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, District Committee chariman, named Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, to head a subcommittee to conduct the hearings. Reynolds, author of the bills, and Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, will be the other subcommittee members.

The pay bill proposes boosts ranging from $500 to $600 a year in the pay of members of the Metropolitan, White House and Park police forces as well as the Fire Department.

The hours bill would give firemen a day off every seven days in addition to annual and sick leave. Hours on the night shift would be limited to 70 hours a week; on the day shift to 50.

A date for the hearings will be set after receipt of a report from the District Commissioners on both bills. Action on a similar measure by a House subcommittee likewise awaits a report from the Commissioners.

Heat Fells One; Relief Forecast

Relief from yesterday's heat, which prostrated one District woman, was promised today by the Weather Bureau which, however, perceived no rain in the offing.

A maximum of 76 degrees today after a minimum of 54 during the night was predicted. Today and tomorrow were expected to be "considerably cloudy."

Mrs. Annie Pulliam, 63, of Chevy Chase, Md., was overcome by heat yesterday while working in her garden. She was given first aid by the Chevy Chase Rescue Squad.

'Sonny' Whitney Sued for Divorce

Stuart, Fla., May 1 (AP).—Circuit Clerk J. R. Pomeroy said today that Mrs. Gwladys Hopkins Whitney had filed suit for divorce against Cornelius V. (Sonny) Whitney, New York socialite.

The complaint was filed April 19, Pomeroy disclosed, and an answer was made April 24. A special master, T. T. Oughterson, of Stuart, was appointed on the latter date. Pomeroy said the text of Mrs. Whitney's complaint was not available here.

Lloyds of London Blesses Romance Of Captive Pandas

Chicago, May 1 (U.P.).—Today Mei-Lan is a man.

Mei-Lan is the giant panda at Brookfield Zoo, imported a year ago from China. Zoo Director Edward Bean decreed today that Mei-Lan had attained maturity, and was entitled to romance.

Hence, Saturday Mei-Lan will enter the adjoining cage of Mei-Mei, the Zoo's 3-year-old female Panda. It will be the first romance for both and the first panda love in captivity.

"Mei-Lan's been calf-eying Mei-Mei all spring," Bean said. "It can't be anything but love."

Lloyd's of London, insurers of Mei-Lan's life, approved the romance. The only uncertainty was the pandas' sex. For two years Bean thought Mei-Mei was a male.

"One's one and one's the other, anyway," he said. "We plan to call the cub Mei-Bei."

Those Extra Costs

No one will be surprised to learn that the Army's new cantonments have cost far more than was originally contemplated. Immense projects of this type planned in a hurry and built with all possible speed are certain to be expensive. The Army will have to take a good deal of ribbing because of the excess outlays it sanctioned to house our new citizen soldiers. Perhaps it may find some comfort in the thought that criticism would be much more severe if the work had been delayed for the sake of economy. In part the excessive costs appear to be explained by the fact that plans for the housing of troops were changed after the present large-scale mobilization had been decided upon. Apparently the General Staff had been thinking in terms of World War I, when housing for selectees was needed for only brief periods of training before they were sent to the trenches in France. A different type of cantonment is needed for the indefinite occupancy now contemplated. Regardless of what the explanation of the extra costs may be, however, Senator Truman's committee is quite properly laying the facts before the public. Where military necessity justifies extraordinary costs, there should be no hesitation in drawing upon the public purse. At the same time the very fact that the United States faces a grave situation should intensify the pressure to prevent waste resulting from carelessness or lack of planning. And the best way to discourage recklessness on the part of administrative officials is to keep the record of their spending before the public.

Trade Associations

That our trade associations are playing a very important part in production for defense is clear from the speeches to the convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce. Perhaps, then, some of us will begin to think better of them. For a good many people have come to look askance at all trade associations, conceiving them to be primarily interested in fixing prices or otherwise restraining trade. Some organizations, it is true, have fallen foul of the antitrust laws because of illegal activities, but the great majority, undoubtedly, are today performing an invaluable service. Specifically they are helping to preserve the system of free industrial enterprise by providing their members with information needed to enable them to function more intelligently and efficiently as parts of an infinitely complicated industrial mechanism.

The convention speakers stressed the value of the fact-finding activities of trade associations. As one speaker said, "specifications, consumption of materials, utilization of labor, status of inventories, capacity for production and a thousand other facts" are needed to build up a great war machine, and these can best be gotten from trade associations. It was pointed out, also, that the New Deal laws and the regulations imposed upon industry during the past decade have multiplied contacts between Government and industry at so many points that the trade association has become essential if only as a go-between. The Government has been able to reach thousands of individual industrialists indirectly through accredited associations acting as channels of communication. The importance of this kind of industrial teamwork in the present crisis is emphasized as well as recognized by the assurance of Attorney General Jackson himself. He has said that the Department of Justice will not prosecute acts performed in good faith by industry at the direction of public authority, such as redistribution of orders and agreements to curtail certain types of production in furtherance of defense preparations.

In time to come, when reconstruction takes the place of war, the trade association will doubtless take on an increasing stature. Long ago it became evident that unregulated competition was not the answer to all our industrial problems.

There must be some form of industrial regimentation, and in this regime the trade association has great potentialities for good if its activities are limited to fact finding and legitimate representative activities. Indeed, the trade association should be able to arrest the trend toward Government control of industry. If permitted to become an instrumentality for levying industrial tribute on the rest of the community, however, it will almost certainly accelerate that trend.

Visit by Matsuoka

The trial balloon regarding the possibility of a visit to the United States by Yosuke Matsuoka which is being assiduously floated in Tokyo raises some interesting questions. Certainly there can be no illusions in Japan regarding the attitude of the United States. If the sponsors of the proposed mission harbor any illusions that the Japanese Foreign Minister can persuade this Nation to accept the "new order" in eastern Asia, Matsuoka may as well stay home. There is not now and there never has been the slightest possibility of such a development. At the same time it is difficult to believe that Japan is prepared to accept and act on the American thesis that the basis of any settlement of the Far Eastern situation must be the restitution of the Nine-Power agreement, the evacuation by Japan of Chinese territory occupied in violation of that agreement, and the end of discriminatory action against American rights and interests in eastern Asia.

Why, then, is there talk in Japan of a Matsuoka mission to Washington? Several possibilities present themselves.

1. The moderate elements in Japan who fear conflict with the United States arising out of a Japanese thrust to the southeast and who realize that the recent Russo-Japanese neutrality agreement has encouraged the aggressive forces in the island empire to act now in southeastern Asia may feel that a visit by Matsuoka to the United States would hold up action for a while. They may be in favor of it, in other words, because it might provide Japan with an excuse for resisting German pressure for the intervention of the island empire in the war, at least until the outcome of the struggle in Europe is no longer in doubt.

2. A Matsuoka mission to the Nation to which China looks for an increasing measure of support, now that Russia's role in the Far East has become equivocal, would weaken Chinese morale by creating the belief that the United States was prepared to come to terms with China's mortal enemy. Thus, if there were any likelihood of Matsuoka coming here, this idea would first have to be effectively destroyed.

3. The Japanese Foreign Minister's "peace" mission might encourage those American groups who favor an appeasement policy vis-a-vis Japan and, through the pressure of such groups, result in a slowing down of aid to China.

4. Finally, there is the possibility to be considered that the Matsuoka mission would be merely for the purpose of throwing dust in the eyes of Americans to blind them to Japanese preparations for a sudden thrust in the direction of Malaya and the Dutch East Indies. Mr. Stimson, even before Mr. Hull, had ample demonstrations of such disingenuousness on Japan's part.

In any event, it is difficult to reconcile the suggestion of a visit to Washington by the Japanese Foreign Minister with the publication in a Tokyo newspaper that usually reflects the point of view of the Japanese Foreign Office, of so-called "exploratory" peace terms based upon the contention that the Axis has already won the war and therefore must be permitted to dictate the peace. If these are the terms Matsuoka proposes to bring with him for the consideration of the American Government, he would save himself time, expense and disappointment by staying home.

Buy A Bond

In formally opening the campaign to sell defense bonds, the President asked for "financial support to pay for our arming and to pay for the American existence of later generations." He studiously avoided discussion of the purely investment aspects of the new defense financing and based his appeal to the people on the opportunity afforded every buyer of a bond or a stamp to "share in the defense of all the things we cherish against the threat that is made against them." The simplicity and single-mindedness of the President's approach is to be commended, for the public will undoubtedly respond much more generously if it realizes that dollars invested in defense bonds are not just an investment but also a means of helping their Government to arm for defense. Participation in the defense savings program should be considered a privilege and an opportunity to serve the country, as the President says, rather than a sacrifice. However, the purchase of bonds will necessitate going without some customary comforts and luxuries which many persons with limited incomes would ordinarily prefer to the most attractive kind of investment. If the popular savings campaign is to measure up to expectations, therefore, these are the people who must be given a special patriotic incentive to forego immediate enjoyments for the sake of dividends not measurable in terms of dollars.

Secretary Morgenthau and his aides will provide all the required information about the strictly investment advantages of the new bond issues. In view of the widespread and rapidly growing interest in the so-called "baby" bonds to which the new Series E defense issues correspond, the desirability of the latter as a form of popular investment is easily demonstrable. But appeals to self-interest based on such considerations will not enlist the measure of support required to raise the billions that must be borrowed next year. Unless the people can be induced to put their savings at the disposal of the Treasury, we are faced by the prospect of inflation through sales of bonds on credit to commercial banks. The majority of the people to whom the President was addressing his remarks may not understand why or how inflation can be averted by tapping real savings instead of financing deficits by borrowing from banks. But an appeal for cooperation, such as the President has made, will certainly bring a generous response from thousands of Americans with limited incomes who are not investment-minded. Having acquired the habit of saving, these same individuals will, it is hoped, come to realize that it is good for them and good for their Government to maintain a close financial partnership not only in times of emergency but all the time, too.

Bridge Of Ships

At the present time Britain is losing tonnage at a rate in excess of 5,000,000 tons a year, or about twice the current rate of output in British and American shipyards. This threat to her life line of food and supplies across the Atlantic makes the action of President Roosevelt in ordering the acquisition by the Maritime Commission of 2,000,000 tons of existing merchant shipping, domestic and foreign, for operation "in such a manner as will make their cargo space immediately effective in accomplishing our objectives of all-out aid to the democracies" thoroughly to be commended. The disposition of this tonnage remains to be worked out. Some of the vessels may be turned over to British registry and thus be in a position to carry cargoes directly from this country to the British Isles. Other vessels may be used to relieve British shipping now operating in nonbelligerent waters. Whatever the method adopted for employing the ships to best advantage for all concerned, however, the move represents a constructive step in the direction of implementing our national policy of insuring a British victory.

Yet it must not be assumed for a moment that Britain's shipping problem will be solved by this action of the Chief Executive. To provide Britain with shipping is one thing; to insure that these ships and their valuable cargoes will not be sent to the bottom is another. The only kind of "bridge of ships" that has any meaning is a bridge on the surface of the ocean. In this particular the United States continues to take half measures when bold action is desperately needed. Mr. Roosevelt, in a striking passage in his address to the White House Correspondents Association, pledged that the British would get the goods she needed, but so many of the goods have been sunk that both the pledge and the lend-lease policy back of it cannot yet be said to have been 100 per cent fulfilled.

What Ho, Watteau!

It remains to be seen whether Lord Halifax, the Ambassador Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of His Britannic Majesty, was really serious about his promise to join his new friends and a few of the local jitterbugs some evening at the Silver Dine and Dance Cafe. Meanwhile, there is certainly something quaint, pastoral and altogether charming about his little encounter with the three barefoot, though not too bashful, maidens in Rock Creek Park the other day. To begin with, it was the springtime. And if the barefoot maidens had been shepherdesses instead of waitresses, and if their names had been Chloe, Amaryllis and Phoebe, instead of Billie, Liz and Ann, the story is something you could have made a Watteau painting or even an Elizabethan lyric out of.

It is rather too bad that the story has already been dressed up into a little homily about democracy, the noble lord and the children of the people, and all that sort of thing. That seems to do the Ambassador a certain injustice. A careful reading of the story betrays on his part no trace of pious condescension. The story is that the girls came out of the water like so many naiads to ask his autograph. That put him right up there in the class with Joe DiMaggio and Robert Taylor and, Ambassadors, like the rest of us, being human, the envoy expanded under such a compliment. Our reporter, at any rate, implies that Lord Halifax and his companion, Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, enjoyed the business, popcorn and all, as much as any other mortal would have done in the circumstances.

The real moral of the story is that pleasant and interesting adventures are as possible here in Washington in the spring as on the sea coast of Bohemia or in the Forest of Arden, only they will never come to those of us who are in too much of a hurry. This one, for example, would never have come to Lord Halifax and his companion if they had not decided to stop their car and to get out and stretch their legs.

Armed Intervention

There can be no question but what the Axis powers have played a very shrewd game in respect to the role of the United States in the present world crisis. Aided by our neutrality legislation they have avoided those incidents which finally provoked our entrance into the first World War in 1917. Nor have they gone beyond protests in respect to our aid to Britain in which we have certainly overstepped the bounds of the traditional rules of international law. The reasons for this unusual restraint should be obvious. Our sympathy for and aid to Britain and her allies are being neither overlooked nor forgiven, but for the moment the main task of the Axis is the destruction of Britain. If that is accomplished, our turn will certainly come. For an America hostile to totalitarian principles and purposes would not long be tolerated.

In the face of such a menace, our present policy of aid to Britain and her allies—short of war—seems utterly inadequate and even dangerous. For if our present conception of aid proves insufficient, and Britain finally falls, it will surely mean that the control of the Atlantic will pass into the hands of unscrupulous and hostile powers, and the struggle will then be transferred to this side of the Atlantic—and even of the Pacific, for we have yet to develop a two-ocean navy.

What, then, should be the answer to this increasingly serious problem of national interest and security? To the writer only one answer seems possible—direct and immediate armed intervention in the struggle. Not only would such intervention tremendously expedite the present defense program of the Nation, but it would bring us into the struggle on the side of a still powerful ally whose will to carry on would certainly be enormously strengthened. Furthermore, it would give us a position of influence in the ultimate peace settlement which it is simply wishful thinking to believe we shall have without armed intervention.

If we fail to intervene in the near future, and thus redress the present balance of forces, we may conceivably find ourselves all too soon face to face with the Axis powers without benefit of "entangling alliances"—for the South American States can hardly be taken seriously as formidable allies. And the fighting will be "over here"—or at least in the Western Hemisphere. The time to act, and to act vigorously, has arrived, if we are to safeguard our national interests.

W. R. WATERMAN.
Hanover, N. H., April 19.

Battle For Democracy

The world situation today is so serious that all-out aid to Britain is fast becoming to mean all-out aid to the United States and the American way of life; and any American who continues to work against aid to Britain is actually working against the welfare of his own country.

The groups and individuals who, under the guise of patriotism, are fighting down our efforts to aid Britain, are now clearly showing their true colors: they want, or at least would tolerate, a Nazi victory. Any Americans who follow the policies of these groups just aren't Americans—all-out for America. They are aiding, materially and morally, the survival of our enemies. This is inconceivable!

Therefore, we have now only one way open to us. It is not an easy way and it requires great courage and sacrifice, but with every true, honest American uniting under the flag of freedom and humanity, unafraid and determined to stand firmly at Britain's side, the battle for democracy can and will be won.

Hitler's Threat

Suppose Hitler does win. What of it, for us? Why not mind our own business, and leave Hitler to mind his? Outside the Western Hemisphere, of course. Is there not room enough in the world for Hitler's way of life and ours too?

The answers to these foolish questions have filled many books, but they may also be given in very short paragraphs.

The Western Hemisphere is inevitably part of Hitler's business. Unless he rules it, his basic principle of Nazi domination breaks down. The Germans cannot really be supermen if half the world escapes them and continues to defy them.

Hitler's way of life contradicts ours so fundamentally that reconcilement seems impossible. Our basic belief (often contradicted by our practice, to be sure) is that the world needs to apply the philosophy of Jesus Christ, in brotherly love and international cooperation. Hitler's philosophy springs from Nietzsche's "Anti-Christ," despises cooperation with inferiors, and exalts hateful conflict. Even more so in science does Hitler's way contradict ours. Our basic belief is that science must seek and exalt only the truth; Hitler demands that science seek first his government's approval.

Shall we not, therefore, be attending strictly to our own business when we try, in time, to prevent a superman conquest of the Western Hemisphere, plus an outlawing of Christian love and honest science?

Drafting Women

I was very much interested in the news item which appeared in The Post of April 25, regarding the views of Mrs. Roosevelt in connection with the drafting and training of young girls in the United States for aid in national defense.

I am a native-born citizen of this country, and I heartily approve of all really necessary measures for defense. However, I shall be much more in accord with Mrs. Roosevelt's ideas on the subject of placing the girls "on exactly the same footing as men" when, and if, the time ever comes that she feels that men should be placed on the same footing with women in giving birth to and rearing our children, and in caring for our homes. Until then, as far as I am concerned, the idea is exclusively her own.

Atlantic Life Line

American responsibility in delivering the goods promised Britain and her allies obviously means U. S. convoys, or the lease of more destroyers to Britain for convoying.

Isolationists call convoying another step toward war. No sensible person denies the risk. Nor does a sensible person deny the greater risk that lies in halfway measures. The greatest risk of all, providing no material aid to the defenders against Axis aggression, was eliminated when we changed the neutrality law. Yet isolationists, who now favor "some" aid to Britain, then opposed the cash and carry policy without which the aid program could never have started.

The necessity is upon us to keep the Atlantic life line open.

Mr. McNutt And Defense

Mr. McNutt, the administrator of Federal Security Agencies, has recently made two public speeches which should be of great solace to Hitler, but to which the thinking American public may well raise objections. He upbraided the distinguished D. A. R. ladies, claiming they had failed to enter wholeheartedly into the social activities for the draftees, complaining that the boys are being neglected. It would seem more fitting if Mr. McNutt would present to our distinguished ladies the absolute need for the proper training of our boys and emphasize to them and to the American people the dire danger which our country faces. If they were impressed with the absolute needs requisite to meet such hardened forces as Hitler's, they must realize that the draft proposition is a downright hard business, and in no sense of the word a picnic.

In the second speech Mr. McNutt warns Congress not to pass any laws which would prevent the laboring man from striking against defense projects, claiming that workers were justified in striking for higher pay on defense jobs. It is pathetic that our high officials can advocate such un-American activities as willfully destroying property, refusing to work, and preventing others from working, and overturning cars of officers of the law; even destroying two or three hundred thousand dollars worth of property in one plant. This was all done in order that the laborer might get higher wages, despite the fact that he was receiving wages as high as he has ever received. This entire defense is to defend the laborer as much as anyone else. He must know that he would be the first to suffer and the hardest hit.

America's Dilemma

The American people are caught in a dilemma which every consideration of honor, humanity and national safety demands must be solved now.

The last election was a clear-cut vote in favor of all aid to Britain short of war. Also it was a vote of confidence in Roosevelt's foreign policy and for the all-out defense of democracy. Since the election the vote has been implemented by a production and training program for defense which runs into billions of dollars. The products of this program are already beginning to pile up on the docks to the extent that the issue now shifts to delivery. Shall we insure delivery to England or shall we allow the Germans to sink all they can and so defeat our will to help? Protection through convoy leads to armed conflicts, which mean war.

Roosevelt, during the campaign, denied that he wanted to lead the country into war. Many people voted for aid to England "short of war." The President, if he now uses convoys, will be charged with double-crossing or worse. The isolationists in Congress and out will capitalize on our well-known abhorrence of war to defeat the whole aid program. Congress dare not act without strong popular support.

This creates the dilemma. This also puts the responsibility of making the important decision up to us, the American people. We must decide whether we meant what we said about aid to England or whether we are content with a futile gesture and are content to let Hitler defeat England and us to avoid the consequences of courageous action which will implement our words. We must decide and speak out to Congress and the President.

We have already decided the basic issue. To support that issue regardless of all costs is honorable, courageous and the one and only way to defend all that we value in life. Surrender is unthinkable. Let us implement our words by deeds. Let us tell the President and Congress that we want them to insure delivery of our help to the democracies of the world in whatever way is most effective.

The Post Impressionist

A Thousand Times No

This business of writing, and trying to find buyers for what one writes, has many fascinating angles. One of these resolves itself into what I have chosen to call the "literature of negation," as manifested by the time-honored rejection slip.

For several years now I have been making a small collection of these neat little missives that emanate from the inner sanctums of our magazine and newspaper offices. I have pondered them from many aspects. I have studied their typography, their phraseology, their physical dimensions, their unfailing anonymity. A person has to do something with them. Throwing them away yields no satisfaction, no catharsis of the emotions.

Now I have come almost to the point of looking forward to receiving them—to see whether the old, old story may not have been told in some new way, whether perhaps some editor's formality may not have crumbled, or whether some vestige of humor may not have trickled in between the lines of the stereotyped message. Occasionally I am rewarded.

Usually only two thoughts are contained in a rejection slip. One is that the manuscript in question does not suit, fit, or meet the current needs or requirements of the periodical. (The word "current" is important, for it implies that at some nebulously future time maybe they'll want this very thing; it lets you down easy.) The other is that the large number of manuscripts received makes it impossible for the editors to write a personal letter or to offer individual comment. Most of them thank you for letting them see the manuscript. A few go so far as to console you by saying that rejection should not be understood as implying adverse criticism of the manuscript's qualities, literary or artistic. Still fewer very restrainedly invite further contributions. All of them, of course, are sorry.

The evolution that some of these meticulously worded dispatches undergo is noteworthy. A well-known metropolitan daily produced this, for example: "The editor regrets that the inclosed manuscript is not available for publication in the ——. It is unfortunate that space is so limited that many manuscripts of much value and interest must be returned."

Some time later this version was changed to the following: "The editor thanks you for submitting the inclosed manuscript and regrets that he is not able to make use of it. It is unfortunate that space is so limited that many manuscripts of value and interest must be returned."

The omission of the word "much" was the thing that got me.

Rejection slips are, after all, but variations on an old theme. It is a simple theme, with no contrapuntal complexities. The theme is "No," in louder or softer but always polite tones. I have thought it too bad that rejections apparently have to be cut and dried, for some of the most interesting ones received by me have been of the personal variety. The shortest one I ever got was from the old magazine Judge. It was simply the word "Sorry!" typed on half a sheet of unadorned white paper. The New Yorker unwittingly came near equaling this in brevity with merely a "No. Sorry," in pencil. This latter paragon of succinctness and restraint came, however, only after some effort on my part—after, indeed, I had sent the manuscript in a second time to make sure that some mistake had not been made. You can't be too careful. Some time I hope to get a slip that says "No" without any "sorry."

Indeed, a writer gets mightily fed up with the almost unfailing politeness of editors. Some day I hope I shall open a returned manuscript and find something like this: "This story is no damn good. It's the rottenest thing I ever read. Don't send me any more. Why don't you get a job in a stone quarry?"

Instead, I get this: "We regret to say, after careful consideration, that we do not find the manuscript which you have been good enough to send us available for present publication. We thank you for giving us the opportunity to consider it, and ask you to pardon the formality of this note. The volume of manuscripts submitted to us is so great . . ." and so on ad nauseam.

Some of the best rejection slips I ever received were from Esquire and Coronet. Their editors do not use a printed form, but each editorial reader adds his initialed comments. They may be quite adverse, but at least they are helpful. When you have read them you know essentially why they didn't like your stuff and what to do in going about rewriting it.

Once I attempted a piece of satire on this subject and sent it to a Boston magazine, wondering what manner of slip it would elicit. I'll never know, for they printed it. Here's the gist of it:

I sat upon a great high stool
And wrote and wrote and wrote,
And when I had a thousand lines
I gave them to a goat . . .

And after he had read them all
With evident delight,
He gathered up the sheets and ate
Them in a single bite . . .

"Not bad," said he, "not bad at all—"
The while he munched some weeds—
"Although I relished eating them
They do not meet my needs."

I climbed back on my stool, irate
And scarlet as a poppy,
But what relief there was to find
I'd kept a carbon copy!

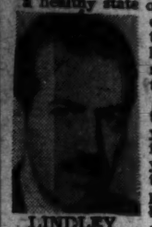
Plane Picture

By Ernest K. Lindley

Gravity Of The Air Situation

THE COOLEST observers we have admit they don't know what is coming next in this war. This is a healthy state of mind. For the events of the last twelve months have shattered many traditional theories.



LINDLEY

For the third time within a year—and the fourth within a year and a half—the German plane-tank combination has proved invincible on land. It has been used with consummate success on four different terrains: Poland, the Low Countries and northern France, Libya, and in the mountainous Balkan Peninsula.

The World War I idea of ground artillery preparation followed by infantry advance as the prime instrument of attack has been destroyed as thoroughly as Plymouth.

In the Balkan attack, as in Poland and France, the German air force struck first at the opposing air force. In two days it had destroyed half the Yugoslav air force, and in four days three-quarters of it—partly in the air and partly by machine-gunning airdromes and planes on the ground. Next the German planes struck at strategic centers of communication.

FOR THE BALKAN onslaught, the Germans used planes based on Rumania, Bulgaria and Sicily. Simultaneously they were employing planes based on Sicily and Tripoli—and then Bengasi—to break the way for their drive across Libya.

As their army moved down the Balkan Peninsula they rapidly brought forward planes to more advanced bases in Greece.

It is now fairly well established that the British were able to evacuate most of their continental army from Dunkerque only because the German attack on land ran a week or more ahead of schedule. The Germans did not have time to establish advanced bases for their fighter planes. The British threw in their Metropolitan fighter force, theretofore reserved for the defense of England. These planes could get over Dunkerque in ten or fifteen minutes, whereas the Germans had to come four or five times as far. As a result the Germans could not keep enough fighters over Dunkerque to protect their bombers.

IN THE BALKAN Peninsula the German timing seems to have been better regulated. Also, the British had no great air base near at hand. At any rate, German bombers, fighter-escorted, flew almost at will over Greece. And the heavy bombing attacks in Libya were also fighter-escorted.

British antiaircraft fire at Piraeus, port of Athens, seems to have been feeble, for German dive-bombers flew through it nonchalantly, dropping low to bomb and machine-gun evacuation ships. Also, they deposited substantial numbers of parachute mines.

In the North Atlantic, meanwhile, British merchant shipping losses to air attack have reached approximate parity with losses to submarines. Most of the increase in shipping losses in recent months has been due to air attacks.

The use of planes to ferry troops and supplies was demonstrated again in the Balkan Peninsula—where the Germans employed some 300 transport planes for this purpose—and in North Africa. Aviation has made it impracticable—and all but impossible—for the British to use the Mediterranean as a supply route. It is now a grave threat to the British naval base at Alexandria, and may be an important means of German transportation to Syria for a drive toward the oil fields of Iraq.

SOME OF THE more grandiose prophets of aviation, at the same time, have been proved utterly mistaken. Those who said London—and England—would be bombed into nothing within a few days have had to eat their words—and keep on eating them—for seven months. Of all the British cities on which the Germans have lavished their havoc, only Plymouth so far has been destroyed. And Plymouth is just across the Channel from numerous German air bases.

The British west coast ports have all suffered damage, but they are still able to handle the ships putting into them—or would be if arrivals were better spaced.

The Germans, of course, have many times the bombing planes they have ever put over England at one time. Somewhere there is an unidentified bottleneck which prevents the Germans from hurling their full air strength at the British Isles. The British, nevertheless, are taking punishment on an ascending scale.

THE BRIGHTER side of the picture is that the production of newer American types of planes has begun: planes which can hold their own with the best that the Germans and British are making. In the medium and heavy bomber classes, in particular, the new American types are excellent. They are fast and well armed, and carry heavy bomb loads.

If these planes can be ferried across the Atlantic, and if the gasoline, lubricating oil and bomb loads can be put in British hands, the balance between British and German striking power in the air will shift rapidly during the next six months.

Significantly, the American airplane program is about to be stepped up once again. Almost a year ago the President said he would like to have a productive capacity of 50,000 planes annually. The schedules laid out last fall called for production at an annual rate of 36,000 in 1942. Soon the program may be pushed not only up to the President's original 50,000, but beyond to from 65,000 to 80,000 planes.

In the present war the sky is literally the limit. Fortunately, our military traditionalists are coming to realize also that the sky has no ceiling.

Korean Army

By Homer B. Hulbert

A Valiant Struggle

THERE IS a notable sidelight upon the epic struggle which China is putting up against the Japanese. It consists in the formation of a separate army by the Koreans in China to cooperate with the Chinese forces in the expulsion of the Japanese from the mainland of Asia. The Koreans have all along been fighting side by side with them in guerrilla warfare, but the time has come when it seems wise to take full advantage of their fixed and unalterable purpose to keep at it until their end is accomplished, by welding them into a separate unit thus heightening their esprit de corps and conferring on them the added dignity of an ally of China.

It looks as if the Japanese had made a serious blunder in driving something like 1,000,000 Koreans out of the peninsula into China, but the capacity of the Japanese in seizing nearly 80 per cent of the arable land of Korea and reducing the former owners to practical helotry has had that interesting result and promises to furnish China with a very useful weapon. This act of vandalism took from the Koreans everything but the fixed determination to give life itself to the cause of national rehabilitation.

THE QUESTION is: Can the Koreans fight? The first necessity is a sturdy physique. It is well known that the Koreans are a physically virile race. They average at least an inch taller than the Japanese. One can watch them at any of the open ports carrying on their backs bales of cotton cloth weighing approximately 500 pounds. An American in Seoul, desiring to move a full-sized piano, called in half a dozen carriers. They smiled when they saw the load, lifted it to the carrying frame on the back of one of their number, and left him to walk off down the street with it. There can be no question of their physical competence.

Another, and more important question is whether the Koreans have the necessary courage to fight. It must be remembered that for the last two thousand years the Korean people have followed the lead of China rather than of Japan. Japan raised the fighting man to the top and drove the merchant to the bottom. China raised a sort of aristocracy of merchants and put the soldier at the bottom. Yet now, with everything against them, the Chinese are putting up a fight that has astonished the world. After all, a nation does not have to acquire the reputation of a bully in order to be willing to fight when the necessity arises.

When, in 1592, Hideyoshi overran Korea in his first mad rush, the Koreans stubbornly held on until her great Admiral Yi Sun-sin invented and built a war vessel with which he defeated the Japanese in a naval battle which did for Asia what the battle of Salamis did for Europe. The grim necessity produced the man.

To judge whether the Koreans can fight, one should note that when Japan started to annex Korea, the Korean army, small and poorly armed though they were, refused to submit. They went to the country and for years fought their enemies in a hundred fights large and small and finally went to the wall, not from lack of courage, but because they no longer had anything to eat or to wear. The Japanese authorities never let the world know the particulars of that gallant struggle. To find out whether these men were patriots or not, one had only to read F. A. McKenzie's book, "The Tragedy of Korea."

AND NOW the expatriated Koreans in China, stripped of everything that makes life worth living, are being welded into a national army under the exiled Korean provisional government, which was organized by the will of the entire Korean people on March 1, 1919, small at first, but growing steadily and capable of reaching the formidable number of 200,000 or more. China has been a good neighbor and a wonderful host to them, but such a force cannot take the field unless it is properly financed. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has been very sympathetic and generous with them, but they need more than this.

Notable things have been done by Finland, Norway, Greece and other lesser powers, but we know of no place where alien expatriates have rallied so splendidly to the defense of the land of their exile. The Korean Provisional Government in China ought to be recognized, encouraged and backed by those who have the money and the materials.

Unless the present world conflict is to result in the universal domination of the totalitarian ideal and civilization, as now defined, is to suffer an eclipse for the next 500 years, every such exhibition of patriotism and self-sacrifice must be cherished and fostered in whatever corner of the earth it may appear. A few hundred Koreans in this country are doing what they can, but it is only a drop in the bucket compared with what is needed. But, however dire may be the result of the present world convulsion, of no man will it be truer than of the Korean that:

> But when, contending long dread fate to master,
> He failed at last her enmity to cheat,
> He turned with such a smile to face disaster
> That he sublimed defeat.

"All-Out Aid"

By Mark Sullivan

Doubts Fostered By Our Position

THE SENATE Foreign Relations Committee voted down the resolution to condemn convoying. By voting it down, they locked it up in the committee—it will not reach the Senate floor. They voted it down, they locked it up, they turned it down, they squelched it, they suppressed it, they buried it. They buried it in two different forms and in three different ways—each time by approximately the same vote, about 13 to 10.

SULLIVAN

So completely did the Senate committee erase the resolution from the face of the earth, that the leading advocate of it, Senator Charles W. Tobey, of New Hampshire, was moved to a dour Yankee quip about his still-born brain-child. The quip was about the undertaker who telegraphed for instructions to the distant relative of an apparently unloved deceased. The comprehensive instructions were, "Embalm, bury, cremate and freeze—take no chances."

The reason for burying the resolution was perfectly sound. It was a request from Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who said that "its passage would be misunderstood abroad."

And it would. Our whole attitude about the war is misunderstood abroad. It is misunderstood because the head of the American Government seems to say one thing to the audience abroad, and a different thing to the audience here in America; because, perhaps unavoidably, words used by President Roosevelt are taken abroad as meaning one thing, but at home as meaning another thing.

There is an example in the same morning paper that carried the news about suppressing the anti-convoying resolution. On the same day Mr. Roosevelt, seeking to achieve the same broad purpose as convoying, seeking to help the British in the matter of cargo ships — Mr. Roosevelt directed that 2,000,000 tons of American cargo ships be pooled, and so used as to help the British. In taking this step, Mr. Roosevelt wrote a letter to Admiral Land, head of our Maritime Commission. Mr. Roosevelt's letter began with this sentence:

"As part of the defense effort to which this country is committed, I wish you at the earliest possible moment to secure the service of at least 2,000,000 tons of merchant shipping which now exists and plan the operation thereof in such a manner as will make their cargo space immediately effective in accomplishing our objective of all-out aid to the democracies."

Observe that Mr. Roosevelt uses the words "all-out aid to the democracies." That phrase, and everything about Mr. Roosevelt's action, will be published in England. The British will exploit the action widely, in order to hearten their people. It will be read in every village and hamlet.

Now what will "all-out aid" mean to the British people, to the ordinary citizen in London or Plymouth or Coventry? To him, the words will mean what "all-out" means in England. It will mean all possible aid. The average Englishman will understand "all-out" as meaning much more than America intends, at this time. It will be fortunate if the English people do not understand "all-out aid" as meaning that we are going all the way into the war. The British government will not understand it that way—they will be accurately instructed by their embassy here. But the ordinary British citizen will not know the limitations upon our policy. In this lies the seed of tragedy.

Meanwhile, about convoying. Apparently Mr. Roosevelt is against it, just won't do it. As a kind of indirect substitute for convoying, he takes two steps. One is the 2,000,000 tons of American cargo ships to be made available to the British. But more cargo ships is not the answer to the German submarine, bombing plane, and surface raider. The only effective answer to them is convoying—that is, American naval vesels and bombing planes to fight off the German attackers.

Also, Mr. Roosevelt is helping the British by what he calls patrolling. "Patrolling" means that American naval vessels and planes spy out German attackers and broadcast warnings which presumably the British hear. This is some help. How much help, depends on where and how the patrolling is done. If the patrolling is all on our side of the Atlantic, it is practically no help to the British, for there are few German attackers in these waters. And even if our patrols go all the way to English waters, they are of only limited help if they are restricted to merely warning. What the British desperately need is American vessels and planes which not merely give warning but actually fight German attackers. That would be convoying.

The basic situation is this: There is no immediate catastrophe ahead for the British. But there is, with absolute certainty—with the inevitability of forces automatically cumulative—a catastrophe in the making, to emerge some months hence. It is a catastrophe of shipping, of preserving Britain's life lines. It will come as surely as the fall months come, unless now, at once, with immediate urgency, steps are taken to avert it. The steps, if they are to be certainly effective, include convoying by us.

Britain Seeks U. S. Aid in Fight To Throttle Axis Financially

Copyright by New York Times

London, May 1.—The British government is trying to bring the United States into line with its own policy in the economic phase of the war—a phase in which, according to the British, the United States could spring into immediate action by cooperating on its blacklist of concerns trading with the Axis and by boycotting Axis trade in every way.

Specifically, the British suggest that there are three ways in which the United States could at once combine with Britain to strangle the Axis economically. Such a combination would, the British believe, be virtually lethal if it could really be worked out. If South America could be included, it would be final.

First, as Dr. Hugh Dalton, the minister of economic warfare, said today, the United States could freeze all German and Italian assets in the United States. Already, of course, the United States has frozen all assets of countries that have fallen to the German army. But, according to Dr. Dalton, that is not enough. He said that the Germans and the Italians still wielded assets in the United States with which they were able to make purchases and run the blockade—and with which they were able to support their agents.

Dr. Dalton said the Germans and the Italians had expected long ago that these assets would be frozen and therefore had taken steps to cloak them. Actual freezing now might not be the most useful procedure, he said, because most Axis funds are probably held in dummy names—Swiss, Swedish or South American. If the United States does decide to freeze the assets, it would be necessary, the British believe, to establish a system whereby this sort of financial veil could be torn aside.

Incidentally, it is believed here that the Swiss Minister to Washington protested against any such freezing of Axis assets when the matter was last considered. This, if true, does not please the British because they believe Switzerland is acting under Axis pressure, and is submitting all her mails to Axis censorship. There is a report here that Switzerland has actually sold to Germany a number of guns for which the British had contracted.

An alternative, as the British see it, is for United States banks and investment houses to refuse to hold accounts, transfer funds or deal in securities in cases where they believe there might be some benefit to Germany.

For example, the British cite the Chase National Bank, whose president, Winthrop Aldrich, is one of Britain's best friends in the United States and heads the British War Relief Society. They say that the American Express Co., a Chase subsidiary, is functioning fully in Axis-occupied countries. If this company existed only for the benefit of United States citizens in these countries, the British say, there would be no objection. But if American Express is undertaking new business either in Germany or in occupied countries, the British assert, it would help the British war effort by closing down.

Betsy Ross Home May Go for Taxes

Philadelphia, May 1 (AP).—The Betsy Ross House, where the famous Colonial seamstress is said to have made the first American flag, may change owners because of unpaid taxes. That was disclosed today when Mayor Robert E. Lamberton transmitted to City Council a proposal that the municipality take over the shrine and assume taxes accumulated in a 35-year period.

The proposal was made by the American Flag House and Betsy Ross Memorial Association. Unpaid real estate taxes are approximately $13,500.

Fair Enough

Senator Wagner

RAYMOND CARROLL, a reporter who worked in some of the crusades of the old New York Evening World for little reforms on the local front, has written a letter in defense of Senator Robert Wagner, whom he knew a long time ago as a neighborhood politican. He reviews Senator Wagner's early career in New York City and in the Legislature and says, "I am not claiming his legislation is perfect or near-perfect, but I do say it is the sincere effort of an honest man."

And that is exactly what I say the legislation ain't—nor Senator Wagner, neither. I say the Labor Relations Act was a subtle conspiracy against the right of free American citizens to work at their lawful occupations unmolested by terrorists of the communistic C. I. O. or extortionists of the A. F. of L. or anyone else. I insist that it was and remains an insincere act and that Senator Wagner has been honest neither in the debate which preceded passage of this atrocity against human freedom nor in his refusal since to rescue his victims from the iniquities that his legislation put upon them.

I HAVE NO patience with the explanation that Senator Wagner is stolid by temperament and a plodder. That has been overdone on his behalf. He isn't as dumb as that, nor is he too dumb to use that reputation as a defense. He knows as well as any other man what the results of his act have been, and he undoubtedly foresaw what they would be, because when efforts were made to insert provisions to protect American citizens from the horrors which they have suffered since, Senator Wagner deliberately and cunningly jumbled up the argument.

In the debate on May 13, 1935, Senator Tydings, of Maryland, offered an amendment providing that employes should be free from coercion or intimidation "from any source." He offered another for the same purpose, declaring it should be unfair labor practice for "any person" to coerce employes in the exercise of their right not to join any union.

Senator Borah said that seemed to him to state a fundamental principle, and Senator Couzens threw in a reminder that "in every big industrial community there is competition between one union and another," attended by "fight" and "force."

NEVERTHELESS, Senator Wagner insisted that for protection against brutality and terror the individual, unorganized victims, frightened though they might be, ignorant of their legal rights and without money to hire lawyers, should have to go to their local courts for injunctions. He said this although strong unions had adopted constitutional provisions intended to deter victimized members from appealing to the public courts. And he held that, although his act would construe as coercion and intimidation the slightest mention of unionism by an employer to an employe, nevertheless the professional unioneer and the night-prowling organizer should be free to use peaceful persuasion. The fact that such persuasion might consist of bloody threats and the most fiendish persecution could not have been unknown to the author of labor's Magna Charta, who nevertheless refused to consider any phrase to shield the unorganized from the organizers.

Senator Wagner didn't much care for sincere debate and insisted on imputing to Senator Tydings a hidden intention to promote company unions. And Senator David I. Walsh, another statesman no more honest and sincere than Wagner, mocked all past experience and well-known truth and dared the future by saying "the employer is the only person who effectively can coerce an employe." The whole Administration bloc ganged up on the nonunion American citizen who didn't want to join a union or pay tribute and sent him wandering among the gritty corridors of local courts where judges and prosecutors beholden to union politicans would give him the run-around, if they wouldn't quite boot him downstairs as a traitor to his class and kind. Powerful unions had become wary of the courts not for the old, given reason that they feared unfairness; they shunned the courts only for fear that in open proceedings public attention will be centered on their shocking oppression of the little people and their racketeering at the expense of the whole community.

SENATOR WAGNER and Senator Walsh both well knew the character of the ruthless unioneer and the true nature of the peaceful persuasion which had thrown so many thousands out of jobs, robbed helpless workmen of millions of dollars in fees and dues and left not a few of them for dead.

But even if it be granted, as it never will be by me, that Senator Wagner honestly and sincerely didn't then realize the consequences of his refusal, it can't be said that he doesn't appreciate the consequences now. Yet he still has lifted neither hand nor voice to mend the evil act which bears his name, and that fact will be my answer to the plea on his behalf by our mutual friend Ray Carroll.

Russia On The Spot

By Barnet Nover

Will Germany Move Into The Ukraine?

THE BREATHING SPELL which Stalin acquired for Russia when he made his cynical deal with Hitler in the summer of 1939 appears to be nearing its end. The bloom has long since gone from the rose of Nazi-Bolshevik friendship. The hostility between Russia and Germany which existed in latent form even in the halcyon days of the Ribbentrop-Molotoff pact is beginning to find active expression. One need only recall in that connection the rebukes recently administered to Hungary and Bulgaria for having made themselves the tools of the Hitler war machine, the nonaggression pact with Yugoslavia after the latter had repudiated the action of Prince Paul in consenting to make his country a half-partner of the Axis, the reaffirmation of the friendship pact with Turkey, the ban on shipments of war materials through Russia and the publication by the Soviet press of reports, denied by the Finns, that a large number of German troops, tanks and guns had landed in southwestern Finland.

NOVER

IT MUST NOT be assumed, however, that Russia is any more prepared now than she was in 1939 to oppose Hitler. She is not. If anything, her position has materially worsened vis-a-vis Germany in the past 20 months, despite the territorial gains she has made in the Baltic and the Balkans during that period.

By giving Hitler the go-ahead signal in August, 1939, Russia sought to divert the Nazi lightning from her borders. She succeeded in doing so. She was even able to share with Germany in the spoils of conquest in Poland and to do so without firing a shot.

Germany also paid handsomely in other ways for Russian neutrality. She withdrew the German populations of Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania. She permitted Russia to acquire those Baltic republics. She not only stood by with arms folded while Russia invaded Finland but also actually helped Russia achieve her victory over that brave nation by threatening to intervene on Russia's behalf if any other powers came to the support of Finland. Later Russia was permitted to acquire Bessarabia and Northern Bukovina from Rumania.

A SCHOOL of thought arose which said that Stalin was the real victor in the war. Actually whether or not Russia could keep the territorial gains she had made after September, 1939, depended on the course of the war. That was also true with regard to Russia's ability to remain at peace.

What is the situation in which Russia finds herself today? The buffer areas she has acquired offer her no protection whatsoever against a possible German thrust. A very considerable German force is strung along the Russo-German border from the Baltic to the Danube. Another sizable German force is in the Balkans. A large part of the western shore of the Black Sea is now in Nazi hands. Hitler may also acquire the Dardanelles as he would certainly be in a position to do unless Russia is willing to resist him. Soon Germany may flank Russia on the southwest as Russia is now flanked by the Reich on the west. And whether there is any substance to Russian reports of German troop landings in Finland or not, the fact that German troops have the right to pass through Finland and Norway means that Russia might, if Hitler so desires, be flanked by Reich forces in the northwest.

AS LONG as there was a French army in the west, and as long as the Balkans were not under German occupation, Russia continued to enjoy a certain measure of freedom of action vis-a-vis Germany. That has now very largely disappeared. Her defense against the Reich can no longer be undertaken by diplomatic measures; it is now practically limited to actions she is in a position to take, and is willing to take, in the military sphere.

For the time being, the mere size of the Russian military force may be a deterrent to a German thrust in the direction of the Ukraine and the Caucasus. Certainly Germany cannot view with equanimity the possibility that her industrial centers in the east, now safe from British bombing raids, will be attacked by the Russians, who are so much closer to them.

ON THE OTHER hand, if Hitler finds it necessary to plan for a long war, he may find it advisable to take the risk to acquire the supplies he needs in the Ukraine and the Caucasus.

One of the things he would particularly need if the war drags on is oil. He might acquire that oil by reaching out and bringing Irak within his Lebensraum. But the British have thought of that possibility and are sending reinforcements to the Arab kingdom. Whether they are there in sufficient numbers to beat off a German invasion cannot be determined in advance. But they might be sufficiently strong to destroy the Iraq oil wells and the pipelines. The conquest of Iraq would then solve none of Hitler's oil problems. The temptation to push on into the Ukraine and the Caucasus might then be too great for Hitler to overcome. And Russia would then be faced by the choice of submitting or resisting. That choice now looms very close. The time that Stalin bought by selling out to Hitler is running out.

Treasury Asks Savings Stamps To Be Sold as Credits on Taxes

By Cecil B. Dickson

International News Service Staff Writer

Secretary Morgenthau disclosed yesterday the Treasury is seeking a new "tax-absorber" savings plan to help taxpayers prepare to meet the new burdens if and when Congress approves the $3,600,000,000 defense revenue program.

Sale of a special type of tax credit security is under consideration, Morgenthau revealed. They could be bought monthly in proportion to income in order that enough savings would be on hand each year to meet March income tax payments, under a plan being studied.

Morgenthau announced a study was being made after two members of Congress, Representatives Dewey (Republican), of Illinois, and Sauthoff (Progressive), of Wisconsin, suggested such a plan should be developed for both estate and income taxes.

Dewey and Sauthoff made the suggestions to the Ways and Means Committee at hearings on the $3,600,000,000 tax program as Ellsworth Alvord, tax expert of the United States Chamber of Commerce, declared the Treasury's proposals were "severe and unrealistic" and would "raise havoc" with persons of middle incomes.

At the Ways and Means Committee hearings late yesterday, Dr. Albert G. Hart, of the Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, submitted a revolutionary tax program drafted by 170 nationally prominent economists.

The proposal called for immediate imposition of drastic income taxes to prevent inflation as well as provide for defense expenditures but to make it possible to shift the rates to meet the rise and fall of price levels in boom times and bad times.

The program called for collection of income taxes at source of income (payroll taxes); a lowering of the married person exemption from $2,000 to $1,600, with a normal income tax rate starting at 10 per cent on lower incomes and ranging up to 40 per cent on higher incomes.

Representative Dewey warned the committee that if the 100 per cent increase in estate taxes proposed by the Treasury is adopted by Congress, it would bring disaster to 162,000 small and middle class industries that employ nearly 4,000,000 workers and produce almost half the Nation's manufactured products.

Such industries usually are headed by one man who has all of his capital tied up in his particular corporation and when the proposed estate taxes are levied, he said, they will destroy the business and throw millions out of work.

Dewey proposed that the tax law be changed to permit a man to pay his "death duties" while living in installments spread over ten years. He said the Treasury would get the use of the money and when a man dies his estate would not be tied up in litigation and could continue to operate.

Highways of the Future:

13th Would Be Sunken, Pass Under Logan Circle

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

(This is the second article in a series illustrating improvements in the District highway system as suggested in the report of the Highway Planning Survey.)

Elaborate changes are contemplated for Thirteenth Street Northwest—one of the city's heaviest-traveled north-south throughfares—in the Highway Planning Survey report now under consideration by the Commissioners.

If recommendations of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, are accepted, a portion of the roadway will be sunk below sidewalk level, grade-separations will be erected at principal cross-streets and Logan Circle will be underpassed.

Varying in widths from 32 to 70 feet between downtown Pennsylvania Avenue and its northern-most point, Thirteenth Street has long presented a major problem of congestion and unsafe traffic conditions.

Because of its popularity as an arterial highway from the business section to outlying northwest areas, the street carries a large share of rush-hour travel each day and authorities have grown more and more concerned about overloading its capacity.

PHOTODIAGRAM of Thirteenth Street Northwest indicating how the thoroughfare would be sunk below sidewalk level, passing under Logan Circle. Cross streets would be over-passed. View is toward K Street

In 1934, Thirteenth Street was widened to 70 feet between Massachusetts Avenue and Logan Circle to comply with the existing width below Massachusetts to I Street.

Beyond Logan Circle, the street now narrows into a 32-foot "bottleneck" which continues to U Street. This has been the cause of increasing consternation among motorists who regularly travel the throughfare.

From U Street to Florida Avenue the street becomes 56 feet wide and then closes down to 40 feet for the rest of its length northward.

Under Capt. Whitehurst's $44,000,000 highway improvement program, plans are set forth to depress Thirteenth Street from just south of K Street to a point north of Logan Circle, running a tunnel beneath the circle.

Cross streets would over-pass the depressed section. At the congested and dangerous intersection of New York Avenue and H Street Northwest, a grade separation is proposed, so that Thirteenth Street traffic may have a free-way north and south.

It also is contemplated in the report to separate the grades at Florida Avenue Northwest—probably overpassing Florida Avenue because of the steep Thirteenth Street hill adjacent to Central High School.

Portions of the narrow street up to Florida Avenue would be widened to conform with the 70-foot width on the lower section, the report states.

The suggested improvements in Thirteenth Street are considered vital by Capt. Whitehurst if any semblance of modernized traffic-control is to be established in Washington.

"Not only is Thirteenth Street now a heavily traveled thoroughfare," said Whitehurst, "but it is strategically located to handle even a larger volume of traffic, if properly developed."

Court Hears Charge Against Divorce Aide

Charges that the District Court unlawfully refers family disputes to its domestic relations commissioner and that the commissioner placed "scandalous and indecent" matter in one of his reports were heard yesterday by Justice James W. Morris.

Attorney Jean M. Boardman, who represents Mrs. Anna M. Bussius, 38, in her suit for alimony against Clarence D. Bussius, Bureau of Engraving electrician, 104 Seventeenth Street Northwest, attacked the legality of the commissioner system.

Boardman urged Justice Morris to strike out of the record a report made by Commissioner Philip M. Hamilton in the Bussius case. "Scandalous," said Boardman, was a statement Hamilton attributed to Bussius, to the effect that Mrs. Bussius told her husband she was in love with a clergyman.

The commissioner advised that Mrs. Bussius have $50-a-month alimony for six months and $75 after that. She claims her husband makes $3,000 a year and wants more alimony.

Boardman said Hamilton's report was based on testimony by witnesses, who were not sworn and not cross-examined. "If you consider this report," he said, "the court will be hearing by proxy a kind of testimony he never would hear himself, on the bench."

The commissioner system was adopted by the court, after study of modern methods in Western cities, to provide a means of investigating alimony and child custody matters without the publicity and acrimony incident to public hearings.

Boardman said he did not contend that reference to the commissioner was improper if both sides agreed to it, but he protested against the reference being compulsory.

Bussius' attorney, Raymond Neudecker, defended the legality of the system and argued that his opponent had not made a seasonable protest against the reference.

29th Division Demonstrates Its Teamwork

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., May 1.—Twenty-ninth Division officers today observed a new type demonstration of infantry and artillery battlefield teamwork.

The occasion was the first of a series of "command post" exercises designed to show on a miniature scale a complete picture of the division in coordinated action.

The entire field command system, from divisional and artillery brigade posts at the rear to infantry outposts at the front, was set up on the parade field near Division Hill as for actual attack by infantry troops supported by artillery fire.

The command points, connected by a radio, telephone and telegraph communications net, were laid out on an abbreviated scale so they could be viewed in relation to each other. Each post was completely staffed with enlisted men, and the groups of officers received detailed explanations of the functions of individual units in the system.

Division, brigade, regimental and battalion staff officers attended the two-and-a-half-hour demonstration, held under direction of Col. O. S. Wood, director of the Twenty-ninth Division's schools.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, division commander, said other such demonstrations would be held soon with command posts set at proper distances for maneuver or battle.

Meanwhile, division headquarters today announced the following additional promotions in the 121st Engineers Regiment, from Washington:

To captains—Edward O. Hamilton, Relay, Md.; Howard A. Burd, Silver Spring, Md.; James D. Turner, 3016 Dumbarton Avenue Northwest, Washington.

To first lieutenants: William James Conlyn, jr., 1936 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest; Anton G. Mensik, 1349 Queen Street Northeast; Andrew G. Gonlyn, 1936 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest.

Another promotion was announced in the division's military police company, that of Malcolm T. Powell, 271 Park, Takoma Park, to first lieutenant.

The following promotions of Virginia men also were announced: Harold W. Leath, 826 S. Highland, Arlington, to captain; John Russell Davis, 1420 Twenty-eighth Road South, Arlington, to first lieutenant.

Advertising Faces Big Task, Hot Springs Convention Told

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hot Springs, Va., May 1.—"Expansion of production facilities resulting from the defense program will place upon advertising the most tremendous task in its history," declared Guy C. Smith in addressing the American Association of Advertising Agencies today at its twenty-fourth annual convention here.

G. C. SMITH

The statement was made as part of Smith's speech of acceptance following his election as chairman of the board of A.A.A.A. succeeding Atherton W. Hobler, president of Benton & Bowles, Inc., of New York. Smith is executive vice president of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., national advertising agency of New York and Detroit.

John Benson, elected president in 1940 for a four-year-term, will continue in office.

"The end of the war," Smith said, "will find America with a production capacity far beyond anything previously dreamed. And it is my belief that if this capacity is to be constructively used for the benefit of the people as a whole, it will be because the production, flow and use of consumer goods is stimulated by advertising in volume and power far beyond anything seen in this country before."

His election was recognition of his long activity in A. A. A. A. affairs. He has served as both secretary and vice president of the organization. He was one of the original advertising agency trustees of the Advertising Research Foundation, a joint enterprise maintained by the Association of National Advertisers and the A. A. A. A. This institution has been responsible for much of the advanced research being done in advertising and merchandising.

Other officers named today by the association included:

B. B. Geyer, president of Geyer, Cornell & Newell, Inc., New York, vice president; Wilbur Van Sant, president of Van Sant, Dugdale & Co., Inc., Baltimore, secretary, and E. DeWitt Hill, vice president of McCann-Ericson, Inc., New York, treasurer (reelected).

Also named to the executive board were:

Members-at-large, terms to expire 1944—Atherton W. Hobler, president of Benton & Bowles, Inc., New York; William Reydell, vice president of Newell Emmett Co., Inc., New York; Leo Burnett, president, Leo Burnett Co., Inc., Chicago, and Edward Lasker, first vice president and general manager, Lord & Thomas, New York, elected for two years to fill unexpired term of Don Francisco, resigned.

The following members at large were continued: F. R. Feeland, vice president and treasurer, Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, New York; Gilbert Kinney, senior vice president and treasurer, J. Walter Thompson Co., New York, and Chester J. LaRoche, president, Young & Rubicam, Inc., New York (terms expire 1942), and Ernest V. Alley, partner, Alley & Richards Co., Boston, and Allen L. Billingsley, president, Fuller, Smith & Ross, Inc., Cleveland (terms expire 1943).

Board members representing councils, named for one-year terms, included: New York Council, D. E. Robinson, general manager, Federal Advertising Agency, Inc., New York; New England Council, Harold Cabot, president and treasurer, Harold Cabot & Co., Inc., Boston; Atlantic Council, M. E. Goldman, partner, the Aitken-Kynett Co., Philadelphia; Central Council, John M. McDonald, treasurer, the Buchen Co., Chicago; Pacific Council, William H. Horseley, president, Pacific National Advertising Agency, Seattle.

Session Weighs Additional Play Centers for D. C.

Representatives of Washington churches and Neighborhood Councils met at the Y. W. C. A. last night to talk over cooperation this summer in meeting the need for additional play facilities for youngsters of the District.

The meeting, called by the Council of Social Agencies, agreed that churches could make use of space in parish halls and church-owned lots for supervised recreational activities.

Dr. Robert W. Eaves, principal of Thomson School, presided, and talks were made by James Ring, of the Alley Dwelling Authority; Dr. Andrew Kress, of the Georgetown University Department of Sociology; Miss Laura Lee, of Freedmen's Hospital; Dr. Edward Gabler, rector of Christ Church, and Hugh Smith, principal of Jefferson Junior High School.

Approximately 100 persons attended the session, at which work of Neighborhood Councils was reviewed and problems discussed.

Montgomery Takes Over Beer Business

Montgomery County yesterday took over the wholesale beer business, which it hopes will produce a profit of $80,000 a year. There were a few "kinks" in the first day's operations, but nobody went thirsty, officials reported.

At a meeting early in the day at Rockville, the county commissioners voted a $25,000 revolving fund, leased a warehouse and named personnel of the new distribution system.

A 90-day lease with a renewal option was taken on the warehouse of Enos Keys & Sons at Linden, Md. Ralph Chase, who is in charge of organizing the new system, reported last night more than 5,000 cases were ready for delivery. The county took over the stock which the private wholesale distributors had on hand Wednesday night when they closed their businesses.

The four new trucks purchased by the county were sent out on deliveries yesterday, Chase reported. A number of orders was taken for today. There are 119 county retailers.

Four former distributors were given appointments in the county distribution system. They are Arthur Heil, of Colesville, appointed traffic manager; Bernard Fling, of Silver Spring, service and stock manager; Edward Mills and Charles Mullinix, both of Bethesda, route men.

Other appointments include: Raymond Smith, of Gaithersburg, order clerk; Roy P. Moore, of Garrett Park, warehouse manager; George Listul and Earl Day, both of Silver Spring, route men.

a Nazi march-through by land to the Middle East.

3. Provide greater protection for the Mosul oil fields.

4. Restrain the French in Syria from letting the Nazis get a foothold there.

Authoritative British sources acknowledged that the present Iraq authorities, who are in power as the result of a coup d'etat early in April, demurred against the new troop landings on the ground that the men previously landed had not yet passed through the country.

The Iraqis, it was stated, had concurred in opening the lines of communication for the previously landed force, but balked when told that more troops were about to arrive to "complete the strength of the imperial forces."

On their part the British insisted firmly that the Iraq-British treaty entitles Britain to maintain as many troops in Iraq as she considers necessary to keep empire communication lines open.

The treaty provides that Iraq must furnish Britain all assistance in her power to this end, including the use of railways, rivers, ports and airdromes in the event of war or the danger of war.

At the same time the British demanded the removal of the Iraq army concentrations from the vicinity of Habbaniyah. In the interim, the new British troops were disembarked at Basra without incident.

The two men will be sentenced next Wednesday. The jury deliberated just 30 minutes before reaching a verdict.

Firemen Called Second Time To Same Fire

After battling a two-house fire to a decision in the 1400 block of Montello Avenue Northeast last night, firemen were called back for a return engagement.

Called to 1404 Montello Avenue, four engine companies found it ablaze and the flames spreading next door to 1406. An hour's fight was required to put out the blaze. Firemen rolled up their hose and clanged away.

They reached their stations in time to receive another call to the same block. There they found 1406 blazing again. The first fire was blamed on a defective flue.

2 U. S. Newsmen, Wounded, Reach Cairo From Greece

Cairo, Egypt (Friday), May 2 (AP).—Two wounded American newspapermen, one of them Robert St. John, of the Associated Press, reached safety here early today after living through the successive dangers of a 400-mile voyage in a small boat and the British evacuation from Greece.

St. John, missing since the German army invaded Yugoslavia and blasted communications with the little kingdom, was slightly wounded in the leg by machine-gun fire.

Also safe was Leigh White, of Columbia Broadcasting System, and the Overseas News Agency, but he was hit in the thigh by two of a stream of bullets which crashed through the roof of the train he was riding from Patras, Greece, to Corinth.

White, and presumably St. John, made their way to Corinth after reaching Greece from Yugoslavia in a small rowboat equipped with a motor.

Food Prices and Profits
A Statement of Safeway Policy

THE forces of market disturbance, fear, and speculation, are at work. Prices for some basic commodities have already gone up. Increases in Safeway's retail prices on these items reflect the rise in wholesale cost, over which Safeway has no control.

It is a fundamental Safeway policy to earn only a small profit on each sale. Safeway pledges that during the period of war emergency it will not change this policy; and that in the future, as heretofore, it will make every effort through improved methods of reduce distribution cost—the difference between what the farmer gets and the consumer pays. You will always be able to buy from Safeway at the lowest prices available anywhere.

Consumers may assist materially in preventing unwarranted price increases by continuing their purchases on a normal scale. There are adequate supplies of food stuffs for every American. Hysterical buying which strips retail and wholesale stocks creates artificial scarcity, which pushes prices to abnormal levels.

Machinery exists within the government to control production, storage and release of commodities, imports, exports, quotas and prices—if it should become necessary to employ these methods to protect the economic welfare of the country.

Safeway further pledges complete co-operation with the governmental agencies and with farmer producers in all efforts to stabilize prices; discourage profiteering; and maintain orderly facilities for food distributon.

MBS Board, ASCAP Reach Agreement

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, May 1.—The Mutual Broadcasting System announced today that its board of directors had approved the terms of a proposed new contract which would bring back to Mutual's 175 stations the 1,250,000 tunes of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Producers.

ASCAP's songs have not been played on the major networks since January 1, when the old contracts expired.

Several of Mutual's key stations having directors and stockholders of the system have already signified approval of the new terms. These include WOR, New York; WGN, Chicago; EHJ, Los Angeles, and the entire Don Lee network of California. A majority of the system's affiliated stations, however, must vote acceptance of the new agreement before the network resumes the broadcasting of ASCAP songs. The decision of the affiliates is expected to be known by the end of next week.

The per program plan provides for a variety of percentages, with the highest being 10 per cent of net receipts for commercial musical shows. There would be a charge of 1½ per cent for ASCAP music at football games, but other sports using the society's music may be broadcast without such charge. Fees for sustaining programs would be little different than in the past.

Last year ASCAP'S first asking price was 7½ per cent of radio's gross income. The broadcasters said this would cost them about $9,000,000, double their fees for music, and so they formed Broadcast Music, Inc., B. M. I., which since the first of the year has been radio's principal source of music supply, concentrating on old favorites, swing arrangements of classics and some new tunes.

The terms of the proposal, if accepted by the Mutual Network, will result in Mutual paying ASCAP approximately as much as it did before.

'Hello' Banned In Army Rules For Telephone

Army officers, from ranking "brass hats" down, yesterday were ordered to do their own dialing when making telephone calls and not to say "hello" when answering.

The instructions are intended to speed up communications within the War Department, and should eliminate, it is said, "the annoying system of having a clerk make the call and then when the person answers say 'just a moment, Col. Doe is calling.'"

The new instruction said that "minutes are lost and telephone lines are unduly tied up" by the banned telephone habits. In answering a phone call hereafter one is to give his name.

Christ Forsaken By Nazi Leaders, Niemoeller Avers

"There isn't a single Nazi leader who has not cut himself off from the Christian Faith!" declared the Rev. Martin Niemoller in his first interview since he was confined in a concentration camp in Germany for defying the Nazis four years ago.

The interview appears in the May issue of the National Jewish monthly, published by B'nai B'rith. It was obtained by Leo Stein, a Jewish fellow prisoners, who lived with Niemoller in Moabit Prison and Sachsenhausen Concentration Camp for 22 months, and who recently arrived in New York.

Niemoeller, a well-known submarine commander in the German navy during the first World War, was leader of the German Confessional Church. He joined the Nazi party shortly before Hitler seized power, but wos soon disillusioned, and became a bitter anti-Nazi.

In 1937 he was arrested and confined in Moabit Prison.

13 Winning Recipes for QuickBreads

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

PLUMP fruit muffins, flaky biscuits, nut-filled sandwich breads and fragrant gingerbread are all delightful hot breads to add interest to menus. They are so quickly and so easily made that most of them can be baked while the rest of the meal is being prepared.

The Post recipe contestants this week have suggested many a way to achieve the lightness and tenderness of delicious quick breads. The results of the entries are as follows:

Mrs. A. G. Weaver, 3914 Fifth Street Northwest, won the first prize with her suggestions for a Southern Spring Dinner menu which includes Egg Corn Bread as the quick bread. Her menu and recipe follow:

Southern Spring Dinner

Smoked Ham Hock with Mustard Greens
Parsley New Potatoes
Yellow Squash with Butter and Onions
Sweet Pickled Beets
Spring Salad Bowl
Egg Corn Bread
Peach Upside Down Cake
Iced Tea

The following recipe for Egg Corn Bread is one that has been used in Mrs. Weaver's family for many years:

Egg Corn Bread—Sift and mix 1 cup waterground corn meal with ½ cup all-purpose enriched flour, 1 tablespoon double action baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon sugar. Add 1 egg and 1 cup milk and beat thoroughly until batter is smooth and entirely free from lumps. Add 4 tablespoons melted shortening and mix well. Pour into 7-inch skillet (iron skillet has always been used which has been preheated with 1 tablespoon of melted shortening). Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, about 20 minutes or until top is light brown. Turn upside down on serving plate and serve while hot with plenty of butter. This batter is equally good when baked in muffin tins or cornbread stick pans.

Mrs. H. Trendley Dean, 224 N. Jackson Street, Arlington, Va., wins the second prize of $5 with a dinner menu and a recipe for Pecan Target Rolls.

Pan-broiled Steaks
Mashed Potatoes
Quick-frozen Asparagus Tips
Tomato-Lettuce Salad
French Dressing
Pecan Target Rolls
Ice Cream with Crushed Strawberries
Wafers Coffee

Mrs. Dean originated the recipe for the rolls and called them "target" because the piece of cherry resembles the bull's eye and the scoring areas are represented by the "lines" made by rolling and cutting the dough. Here is the roll recipe:

Pecan Target Rolls—Work 2½ tablespoons shortening into 2½ cups selfrising flour. Add ¾ cup sweet milk slowly and stir until smooth. Place on a floured board and roll out to ⅛ inch thickness. Melt 1 tablespoon butter and spread over dough with back of spoon. Spread ½ cup strained honey over this, then sprinkle with granulated sugar mixed with brown sugar and a dash of cinnamon. Distribute ¼ pound package of pecans over the top and roll like a jelly roll. With a floured knife, cut into one inch pieces and place each piece in a buttered and floured muffin tin, placing ½ cherry in center of each. Bake as for biscuits, from 15 to 20 minutes. If desired a little honey may be brushed over the top of each roll.

Mrs. Beulah Wheeler, 1646 Thirty-third Street Northwest wins the third prize of $3 with her dinner menu highlighting Poppyseed Muffins. The menu and recipe for muffins follow:

Dinner Menu

Spiced Apple Juice Cocktail
Cabbage and Pepper Relish
Fricasseed Chicken with Gravy
Boiled Rice Peas
Tomato and Avocado Salad
Poppyseed Muffins
Rhubarb-Strawberry Roly-Poly

Appealing in texture and color as well as flavor is the above menu. The Poppyseed Muffins recipe is as follows:

Poppyseed Muffins—Sift 2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ cup sugar together. Add 1 slightly beaten egg, or 3 egg yolks, 1 cup milk and ¼ cup melted shortening. Mix only until ingredients are moistened. Fill greased muffin tins, 2/3 full, sprinkle with 2 tablespoons poppyseeds and bake in hot oven, 400 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes.

The winners of the ten $1 prizes are as follows:

Onion News

For those persons who think the French fried onion ring is beyond their power to make, there is good news. There is a 2½ ounce tin to be had containing onions that have been dipped in a cover batter, then fried to golden, crisp wisps, tender and sweet. These crisp rings provide a definite something when reheated to cover a steak or as an accompaniment for cocktails.

Romantic Lace For Evening

Lace is the talk of fashion experts for everything from summer lingerie for the bride to tiny little muffin or peasant caps tied on with velvet ribbons. And for summer evenings there is something about the sheer coolness of lace that adds a romantic touch. Lace is especially practical for Washington as it doesn't show wrinkles and always looks fresh. It is usually more effective and smarter when combined with other materials. A popular favorite is the combining of old family lace with new fabrics. Here are two suggestions for using lace—old or new. Left—Blue and jet black, interpreted in gossamer sheer lace, is one of the newest combinations. The low hipline of the gown is outlined by a lighter lace applique on the black. Bodice is of black crepe. Right—There is a magic in the pink chiffon filtering through the sheer black of the diaphanous dream dress above. Especially beguiling are the low, heart-shaped neckline and slim bodice hugging waist.

Have Definite Time for Exercise, But Not Right After Meals

By Ida Jean Kain

THINKING about slimming is a pleasant form of daydreaming. Even though you are not getting anywhere, you are inclined to put good intentions on a footing with the accomplished fact.

One sure way to snap out of it is to have some candid camera shots taken without your good girdle and your Sunday best pose. Stand as you do when off guard, so your figure will look its worst. If you are in real need of diet and exercise, the results will be such that you will want to take direct action. To keep from toying with the temptation to let things slide now and then, post the evidence on your mirror, where your glance will fall on it often.

Should Set Routine

The less you have to think about exercise beforehand, the better. It helps to set a definite time for your daily dozen. The regularity tends to make it more or less automatic, like doing the dishes at 8:30. At 10 o'clock you exercise.

So long as it is the same time every day, the hour is of no consequence. The only time not to exercise is immediately after a meal. You should wait an hour, preferably two. Exercising right after a meal won't keep the excess calories from turning into fat, and it might give you indigestion.

The aim of a daily dozen is not to reduce. It won't help you to lose much weight, but it will give you a beautiful figure. You will scarcely believe your own eyes when you see the improvement that can be made over a period of time with just a little exercise every day. If you are accurate as to the position and movements, you can take it as slow and easy as you please.

Lying down exercises are twice as easy as the ones you take standing. You don't even have to hold yourself up! On your ho-hum days, lie down on the floor and take a good, big stretch. Stretch and pull until you reach every lazy muscle. Relax, and stretch again.

Exercises Are Easy

Over on your back now and flex your knees with feet on the floor, and pull in with the lower abdominal muscles and dig the small of the back down against the floor. That's an exercise that rests your back. From the same position, keep digging the back into the floor as you flex alternate knees up to chest.

Then sit up, clasp the arms about one knee, and hug it to chest, and stretch the other leg out in front on the floor. Hold that position as you rock back and forth. Rock backward until shoulders are on floor, straight leg in air. Then rock forward to sitting position again.

You couldn't ask for easier exercises than those.

Paint Pictures On Glass

A RAINBOW of hues in a bouquet of old-fashioned posies! You can paint it yourself on a sheet of glass which you lay over a printed pattern—and then you can proudly display your handiwork on the walls of your home.

Full size, "Old-Fashioned Bouquet" is 9 by 12 inches, just right for framing. And you've other lovely patterns the same size to choose from—"Old Oaken Bucket," "Gay-Feathered Parrots," to name a few. You paint all of them the same way, following with your brush the pattern which you see through the glass.

Oil paint is the paint to use and three colors are enough—red, yellow and blue. Mixing them is easy with a chart which tells how to get all the shades you need. Purple? It's just a mixture of red and blue. Green? Mix yellow and blue. To darken or lighten a color add black or white household enamel.

Our set, "Six Pictures to Paint on Glass—Second Set," includes "Old-Fashioned Bouquet," "Old Oaken Bucket," "Mother Dog and Puppy," "Gay-Feathered Parrots," "A Child's Prayer" and "A Cat Twosome." All full size—9 by 12 inches. Includes color chart, directions for colors to use.

Send 15 cents in coins for our set of "Six Pictures to Paint on glass—Second Set," to the NEW YORK OFFICE, The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of picture set.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch.)

Defense activities are humming again at the Plush Sofa Club since the return of the Ladies Parachute Patrol from Palm Beach.

The patrol will initiate its new drilling season with a series of teas, cocktail parties, luncheons, dinners and buffet suppers at the club during the next two weeks. At these events plans will be completed for a training school to fit local socialites for defense activities.

Mrs. Badgerton Bellwether, commander of the patrol, said the training course would include lessons in makeup, dress, voice, reducing, etiquette, bridge, swimming, tennis, harp playing, art appreciation, personal magnetism, table decorations and allied subjects.

"The American woman must rise to the present crisis by making herself as fascinating as possible," said Mrs. Bellwether.

The Cave Set

Mrs. Adam Stalactite has finally been prevailed upon to exhibit her collection of old fruit jars during the coming Pilgrimage to Historic Cellars. Mrs. Stalactite will, of course, not be present in person at her home, but local glamour debs in colonial costume carrying Paul Revere lanterns will act as guides for the visitors and explain the many fascinating items to be found the Stalactite cellar.

Another famous cellar to be opened to the pilgrims is that of the Caleb Fossils. This contains many enchanting items including an old barrel churn, old coal oil lamps, old whisky jugs, old boxes once used for storing apples, potatoes, turnips, etc., as well as many interesting varieties of fungi.

Ordering the Meal

"Now who wants the crab cocktail? What Mrs. Penny? . . . Tomato juice? . . . All right, one tomato juice—no wait! Mrs. Bibbs wants the tomato juice too! Oh, and Mrs. Clemm . . . What? . . . Oh, you don't? . . . The crab cocktail?

"Let's see now, Mrs. Penny and Mrs. Bibb want the tomato juice, and Mrs. Crab the Clemm cocktail—I mean the crab cocktail . . . Now what about you Mrs. Spike? . . . The orange juice? . . . What Mrs. Penny? . . . Oh, you want to change from the tomato to the orange juice? . . . All right.

"Now Mrs. Tagg, what's yours? . . . The crab cocktail? . . . All right, and I think I'll take the melon cup . . . What Mrs. Penny? . . . Yes, there's a melon cup . . . Yes, right there under the grapefruit supreme . . . What? . . . Oh, you want to change to the melon cup? . . . No! . . . Oh, the grapefruit supreme!

"Now then we want three tomato juices and three crab cocktails and four melon cups and two grapefruits supreme—what? . . . No, there's only six of us . . . Well then, let's start again.

"Now I know Mrs. Crab—I mean Mrs. Clemm wants the crab cocktail . . . What Mrs. Clemm? . . . You'd rather have the melon cup? . . . All right. Then one melon cup—no wait I want a melon cup too! Now who wanted the crab cocktail? . . . Didn't you, Mrs. Penny? . . . Oh, that's right, you changed to the melon cup! . . . What? . . . Oh, that's right! It was the grapefruit supreme!

"Well, I know there was somebody wanted the clam—I mean Clemm cocktail . . . Oh, was it you Mrs. Tagg? . . . Well, then we want two melon cups and two crab cocktails — what Mrs. Penny? . . . You want to go back to tomato juice? . . . All right—say though, don't you suppose it would be better if we just got some separate slips and all wrote our own orders?

Lower Necklines For Summer

This summer probably will see a slight change in our neckline habits. The high-necked prints of last year are giving way to summery dresses with more feminine deep V and deep square necklines. These, too, are prettied up with ruffles.

Tailored necklines gain interest with detachable neckwear—bright polka dot scarves, white braided bibs, middy blouse collars. An assortment of interesting neckwear makes a scanty wardrobe seem at least twice as large.

Makeup Permits Redhead to Wear Any Color Scheme

Hollywood, Calif.—A halo of red hair usually puts a girl on the "gentlemen's preferred" list. It's really up to her, for she can flatter the shining aureole with a beautiful makeup. As for her choice of wardrobe, it's my contention that she may wear any shade, even red, if she is willing to adjust her makeup to each different color she wears.

For example, Geraldine Fitzgerald, who may be called the mahogany type, since she has a great deal of brown in her hair, is one of the many girls with coppery tresses who may wear the difficult blue-reds provided the delicate pink undertones in her light skin are neutralized by the proper cosmetics.

Geraldine avoids foundation creams and powders with either pink or yellow in them. Rather, for her, a neutral shade which will draw off the "heat" of her skin tones. When complete, her makeup, which includes a minimum of garnet rouge and garnet lipstick, brown mascara and pencil, should have an ethereal cameo effect.

Ann Sheridan, with dark auburn hair tinged with gold and a creamy complexion, is meant for color and lots of it. And by "color" I dont mean a vulgar display of cosmetics but rather a small amount of brilliantly-toned makeup, high peppery shades dexterously applied and blended to flatter hair, skin and blue-grey eyes.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl's Favored Beau Is 'Rushing' Her Best Friend, Since Their Recent Meeting; She Loves Him; Her Friend Doesn't; Should She Ask Her to Snub Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going steady with a pre-med student who means just about life to me. We have made no plans for the future, but possibly I had been living in dreams of a time when we would be always together—which makes my problem so hard to face. Recently I introduced one of my best girl friends to this young man. This girl (whom I will call Jean) is a wonderfully unselfish person and very popular, because of her vibrant personality. Boys mean absolutely nothing to her except just good fun.

The moment I introduced her to this young man, I realized he was attracted at once. In fact, a twinge of jealousy went through me, which I tried to hide. I pretended it made no difference to me if he liked her. They danced together all evening and during their last dance, he asked her for a date, which she refused. Later, I happen to know he called her several times and never found her home. Then he telephoned me and asked me to arrange a double-date with her and a student friend of his. It was to be for a med school dance.

I got in touch with Jean and asked her what she thought of the idea. She said the proposition didn't appeal; not because she wouldn't enjoy our company, but because she doesn't like being around doctors, "who are so unnatural," she said. So that was that. But now it seems she has since had three or four dates with this fellow. Do you think I should tell her what he means to me? She is the sort of girl who wouldn't want to hurt anyone, and I know if she realized how I feel about him she wouldn't have encouraged him. Please advise me. S. M.W.

Best Let Enthusiasm Run Its Course

DEAR S. M. W.: As has been said, "Silence is golden,"—and never more so than in this case, I think. In view of the young man's sudden, overwhelming interest in Jean, any efforts on your part to artificially stem the tide of that interest would prove unavailing, I am sure. You might as well steel yourself to the proposition of watching it run its course. Supposing you were to unburden your heart to Jean, and persuade her to discourage the boy's attentions (out of consideration for your feelings), it is likely such discouragement would simply add fuel to the flame of his enthusiasm for her.

Moreover, since he could turn so lightheartedly away from you, after a considerable sentimental acquaintanceship,—during which no mention ever was made of a "future in which you would be always together,"—the inference seems clear that he never evaluated the association as anything more than a transient attachment, at least on his part. So perhaps it is for the best that you have sustained this rude,—but timely, awakening from an impossible dream of happiness.

M. H.

She Resents Man's Criticism of Wives

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I resent the views expressed by "H. V. H." in your column of April 29,—in which he holds the majority of wives to be shrews in their treatment of their respective husbands. I challenge his statement that most married men "regret their marriage within the year after making it." Most husbands will tell you that they "wouldn't have amounted to anything" if it wasn't for their wives' backing and encouragement. Also, the male of the species is, by nature, a distinctly selfish creature,—and it is healthy and sensible for wives to put up a fight for their rights, occasionally.

From the woman's angle, let me say that the first couple of years of marriage are the hardest,—for both parties concerned. For one thing, there is necessity for almost continuous "personality adjustment," as each gets to know the other's faults and weaknesses; and for another thing, the first child usually arrives to complicate the picture during this period. Few men realize the nervous tension connected with child caring,—and while a husband has his business worries, at least he is accustomed to them; whereas a bride is charged with manifold responsibilities entirely new to her experience.

I have been a wife for 30 years. I have a fine husband and we have reared three children. We have had good times and bad, and have always shared them together. I have worked in the business world as well as at home, and believe me when I say that rearing children properly is the most nerve-taxing of all occupations. My husband and I are still together, after 30 years, and reasonably content with each other for the reason that we always took time to study each other's likes and dislikes, and conduct ourselves accordingly, so as to minimize causes of friction.

I would remind "H. V. H." that there are neither perfect men nor perfect women. All of us have faults—and if we busy ourselves with correcting our own, we will have little time or impulse to criticize the other fellow's.

CONTENTED WIFE.

It's About Time

Do's and Dont's For Your Hair

A good general rule to follow is to brush your hair always with the wave. If you don't do this you will be brushing against the grain and produce a muddle. The Prophylactic roll-wave brush is a perfect combination of wave preserver and thorough-brusher. It has short bristles.

Use a good stiff brush for your 100 strokes. Always brush up from the scalp. But brush your bangs both up and down. Bend over to brush your hair, using a forward, up and over movement. Don't miss your hair line. If you have curls, brush each one separately with a thorough rolling motion, so that it can fall easily in line again. To do this you will have to use both hands. One diminutive curl brush with slanting bristles was designed for such careful manipulation.

Wessels and Mrs. Miner Give May Day Parties

By Hope Ridings Miller

TWO AFTERNOON PARTIES—one outdoors, the other in—took over the May Day social calendar as a sizable number of Capitalites were out and about from 5 to 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Invited for "anytime after 5:30," were the 150 guests at the roof garden fete given by Capt. and Mme. Karl Wessel. Along about the same time a much smaller party was under way in the apartment of Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner, who invited a few friends in to meet Mrs. Alfred Wilcox. The latter arrived on Wednesday from Los Angeles and plans to be here for several weeks.

Lowering clouds and intermittent showers shortly before the roof party started prompted Mme. Wessel to decide she would receive in her apartment at the Woodward; but by the time the first guests arrived the sun was out again, and so were the host and hostess. For more than an hour the company was ushered to the roof and enjoyed as pleasant an outdoor fete as you can imagine. Then the weather took charge again, as another shower started, and guests scurried inside and finished the party in the Wessel's apartment.

Most of the guests, however, were there earlier, and had one of the loveliest views of Washington from the roof far above the tree-tops. Receiving informally, wherever she happened to be, Mme. Wessel was trimly turned out in a figured frock, which featured a floral design in yellow and black, splashed on a white jersey background. Her small hat, contrived of white felt bows, was arranged halo fashion on the back of her dark hair. Capt. Wessel, who is the Swedish Military Attache, was here, there and everywhere, seeing that everybody had a good time. Also looking after the guests was pretty Mme. Wennberg, wife of the Assistant Military Attache of the Swedish Legation.

Party Is Farewell For Mme. Wessel

The party was arranged so Mme. Wessel could say goodby to her friends. She will be off May 9 for her homeland. "But you're coming back in theautumn, aren't you?" was what almost everybody present asked of Mme. Wessel.

"Yes, I'll be back," she promised, "so this is only farewell for a while." She plans to return in September, and hopes to bring with her then, her son and daughter, who are now in Sweden.

An especially popular diplomatic hostess, although she has been in Washington only a short time, Mme. Wessel has a host of friends in a number of Washington circles. Yesterday's company, therefore, presented a representative number from the diplomatic, official and residential contingents.

Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Swedish Minister, arrived early and stayed late, as did several other members of the Swedish Legation. The Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope were there; also the British First Secretary and Mrs. G. F. Thorold, the Netherlands Naval Attache, Capt. J. E. Meijer Ranneft, and the Finnish Counselor and Mme. Risto Solanko. Admiral and Mrs. Ralston Holmes greeted friends on all sides, as did Col. and Mrs. Horace Smith and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling.

Many Notables Seen in Throng

The former Austrian Minister, Edgar Prochnik, was deep in conversation with Mrs. McCeney Werlich when I saw him. A few paces away Mme. Prochnik looked like a fashion plate, in a navy blue frock set off with a high crowned blue and white striped hat. Miss Carolyn Nash made the rounds and then went on to Mrs. Miner's party, as did Edward Van Deventer and several others. Mrs. Marion Warburg, who deserves a citation among the "best-dressed" anywhere, appeared in a smart black ensemble. Talking with her was Rafal Lepkowski.

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet were among those arriving for the first half of the party; as were Mrs. Emil Hurja, Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, Mrs. Martin Vogel and Col. and Mrs. Arthur Harris. Still others there included Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Newbold, Ralph Snowden Hill, Mrs. Clifton Phillips, Baroness and Baroness von Seidler, Miss Natalie Askenazy, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Amberg, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Mrs. Ives Lowe, Capt. and Mrs. W. H. P. Blandy, George Williams and Col. M. Robert Guggenheim, who was there without his pretty wife. The latter having given a luncheon yesterday, was taking a rest from parties for the afternoon. Incidentally, she and her husband, accompanied by the latter's mother, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, of New York, will be off today for Williamsburg to spend the weekend.

The latter, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a silk lace gown with a train and a sweeping tulle veil bordered with lace. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and valley lilies. Her sister, Miss Virginia Melling, was maid of honor, and Miss Mary A. Cooksey, sister of Mr. Cooksey, was bridesmaid. Miss Peggy Lane, daughter of the Minister to Yugoslavia and Mrs. Arthur Bliss Lane, is in Doctors Hospital, where she is recovering from an operation for appendicitis, performed Wednesday night.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

MRS. KERMIT ROOSEVELT returned to Washington yesterday after a visit here earlier in the week. She will consult with Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, chairman of the Washington committee of Young America Wants to Help, during a stay of several days. Walt Disney gave the entire rights of the Washington premier of Fantasia to Mrs. Roosevelt and every cent will go to England.

A group of New York public school children are partly responsible for the Young America idea. They visited Mayor LaGuardia and asked if there wasn't something they could do to help. About that time Mrs. Roosevelt returned from England, where she had spent six months with her husband, an officer in the British army. It was just after Dunkirk, and she felt even more strongly the need for aid. Mayor LaGuardia told her about the children's visit to him and soon she had organized "Young America Wants to Help."

DEFENSE continues to bring people to Washington who have unusual stories to tell. The other night at dinner there was a quiet, retiring young man named David Southey. It turned out that he had built 400 of the air raid shelters in London. An architect, Mr. Southey went to England for a vacation once and stayed for five years. Before the war he started designing shelters in London and furnishing them with the necessary beds and other equipment. After completing his work, he remained on as a fire-fighter. Every night he joined a crew of Englishmen who rushed to smother the incendiary bombs before they did too much damage. The nearest he came to being injured was when a bomb exploded 50 yards away, which is near enough almost to knock a person unconscious. Mr. Southey is now working in the engineering division of the War Department but says that he hasn't had any offers yet to build air raid shelters in this country.

EVERYBODY who visits the art gallery of the Intimate Bookshop in Georgetown is having fun trying to identify the people in a painting by Mrs. Dean Acheson. The subject is the brilliant opening of the National Gallery. One woman in the crowd, wearing a headband to match her dress, was immediately spotted as Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt. Some believe they have picked out Justice Frankfurter and other notables in the painting. One man offered to buy it if Mrs. Acheson would give him a chart of identities, but she is keeping silent on the subject.

Sharing honors with Mr. Messersmith were Dr. Raul Maestri, assistant director of the Cuban newspaper, Diario de la Marina, and Lieut. Col. Robert E. Cummings, who has been named Military Attache at the United States Embassy in Havana.

The guests were George T. Summerlin, Herbert Feis, Laurence Duggan, Joseph C. Green, Philip W. Bonsal, Richard Pattee, Emilio G. Collado, Newbold Walmsley, all of the State Department; Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union; Dr. Jose T. Baron, Dr. V. Valdes Rodriguez, Dr. Alberto Muxo, Maj. Felipe Munilla, Dr. Nicholas Rivero, jr., and Rafael Mulet, of the Embassy staff; Harry W. Frantz, Edward Stunts and Alberto Barreto.

Rescue Program Discussed at Tea

Mrs. Dean Acheson entertained at a tea yesterday at which guests discussed another of the many important causes in which Washingtonians are interested. Miss Ingrid Warburg, executive assistant to the chairman of the Emergency Rescue Committee, came down from New York to explain her committee's work.

The Washington group will hold a dinner at the Shoreham on May 30, when Eve Curie will speak. The committee, headed by Frank Kingdon, is interested in bringing safely to this country leading Europeans whose lives are threatened because they oppose the totalitarian philosophy.

Guests gathered in the drawing room of the Acheson home in Georgetown, where the French windows open onto a brick-walled garden. Among those present were Mrs. Richard V. Oulahan, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Donald Hiss and many others.

Mrs. Manly Gives Birthday Party For Mrs. Richberg

A double celebration luncheon drew a small company to the Spring Valley home of Mrs. Basil Manly yesterday, when she feted Mrs. Donald Richberg at a birthday party and also marked her first free day from jury duty in a month. Mrs. Richberg's birthday, incidentally, fell several weeks ago and the event in her honor was planned to take place then. One postponement led to another and finally, the fete was set for May Day.

Guests arrived laden with birthday presents and primed with pretty speeches. A telegram from Mr. Richberg, who has been at Hot Springs, Ark., for two weeks and is returning home tomorrow, was read at the beginning of the informal program to which everybody present contributed.

Among those who congratulated the hostess "on being free once more" and wished Mrs. Richberg "many more happy birthdays" were Mrs. Harry W. Blair, Mrs. Edgar Goodrich, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Frank Waring, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller.

Peace Group Parley Looks To Future

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom—an organization born during the World War—yesterday opened its annual meeting at the Washington Hotel. With only a discouraging record of war and destruction presented by a review of world events during the past year, the theme of the convention is "The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom Faces the Future."

Miss Gertrude Bussey, professor of philosophy at Goucher College, is presiding at the sessions.

Miss Dorothy Detzer, executive secretary of the league, which has its headquarters in Washington, said yesterday that a resolution will be presented for the action of the membership, urging that this Government send ships for the refugees from occupied countries, now in France, England and Spain. There are thousands tied up in Europe, she said, whose papers are in order, who have been obliged to flee and whose lives are in increasing danger because of their stand for democratic ideals, but who are unable to reach this country because no ships are available to bring them. With so much being said of giving support to the people of the democracies, here is an opportunity to give it in a practical way, she declared.

The league has been able to keep in touch with many of its members in Europe despite occupation and censorship, she said. Messages on postal cards such as "The family is all well except Edna, who has been in the hospital awhile" are easily understood to convey that all members are well except one who is in prison.

Miss Detzer devoted her annual report yesterday to a discussion of the philosophy on which the organization bases its opposition to war and violence. Pointing out also that the whole field of Latin-American relations lies at hand to be cultivated, she declared: "All our military defense will be as futile as the Maginot Line unless the most powerful nation in this hemisphere will seek and find ways to transform the Colossus of the North with his Yankee imperialism into a good neighbor with imagination and kindness and generosity."

She added that a sentimental attitude of good will toward Latin-American neighbors is not enough "and we must come to understand that so prosaic an item as Argentine beef may be far more important for our common future than the greatest diplomatic skill or military cooperation."

One of the keynote speeches of the annual meeting will be that of Dr. A. J. Muste, director of the Fellowship of Reconciliation at the luncheon today.

A panel this evening with members of the league as speakers will be led by Warren Mullin, of the National Council for Prevention of War.

A full day session on world government will highlight tomorrow's meeting with a list of prominent speakers. Kathleen Norris, novelist, and Rabbi Sidney Goldstein, of the Free Synagogue in New York, will be guest speakers at the dinner tomorrow night.

Women's Units Give $91,250 For Cathedral

The Women's Committees of the Washington Cathedral last night presented a check for $91,250 to the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, as a gift from the women of America to complete the construction of the Women's Porch of the National Cathedral.

The presentation was made by Mrs. Allan Forbes, of Boston, national chairman of the Women's Porch Fund, in the name of more than 400 contributors. The occasion was the annual dinner of the Women's Committees, held at the Sulgrave Club.

The campaign has been under way for the past several years but the bulk of the gifts came in recent months through the work of the chairman and about 20 State regents. Approximately $40,000 has been raised since the last annual meeting.

The Women's Porch, now partially completed, faces Woodley Road and will, upon completion in several months, become the first completed permanent entrance to the cathedral. It is built into the north transept of the great Gothic structure on Mount St. Alban, and will be dedicated to the Christian womanhood of America. Money raised in excess of construction and endowment costs is to be used to landscape the approach from Woodley Road and complete a permanent driveway to the cathedral.

The tympanum of the Women's Porch will be dedicated this morning at 11 o'clock at the cathedral, in the name of Mrs. William Adams Brown, for ten years national chairman of the Women's Committee.

20th Century Club Opposes Rent Regulation

The Twentieth Century Club, at its annual meeting yesterday passed a resolution expressing opposition to H. R. 3736, the bill which proposes to regulate rents in the District of Columbia.

The club also voted to make contributions to several civic and philanthropic projects. They included $25 each to the Citizens Committee for Community Gardens, the Georgetown Girls Club and Gallinger Hospital, for further furnishings for the occupational therapy room of the children's ward, which the club established last year. It also voted $50 to the National Craft Training Center, $100 to the Citizens Committee for Training Blind Workers and $50 for the United Service Organization drive.

Mrs. Lawrence Martin, who is completing her first year as president of the club, presided. Five new members elected from among ten candidates for the board of directors were Mrs. Stanley P. Young, Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant, Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Mrs. Francis M. Goodwin and Mrs. Virgil C. Jackson.

Other new officers, elected without opposition, are Mrs. Stephen Clop, second vice president; Mrs. Robert S. Townsend, recording secretary; Mrs. W. Hayes Yeager, treasurer, and Mrs. John G. Ladd, assistant treasurer.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

U. F. W. A. to Squelch Communist Members

C. I. O.'s United Federal Workers of America is preparing a swing to the right on policy. Communists or party-liners in the Government employe union, if any, will either be ousted or clamped down on under plans know to be under consideration by U. F. W. A.'s leadership. Locals that the leadership finds following the Communist Party line must either mend their ways or face reprimand, or perhaps expulsion. C. I. O. leaders are known to view U. F. W. A. in a category somewhat different than its other unions. The Federal Government has a law forbidding the employment of Communists, they argue, and they believe the law should be observed. Furthermore, they explain, a Federal employe and U. F. W. A. member found to be a Communist would damage the entire C. I. O.

It's a fact that the rightward swing already has started. It's known, for example, that Allan Haywood, director of C. I. O. organizing and nominal head of U. F. W. A., warned active U. F. W. A. leaders not to participate in the activities of organizations believed to be Communist "fronts." It's also understood that Haywood wrote Eleanor Nelson, U. F. W. A. secretary-treasurer, forbidding locals to send delegates to the recent rally of the American Peace Mobilization, which was held in New York City. Participation in the rally by U. F. W. A. officers and members is understood to have been planned.

It's reported on good authority that C. I. O. President Philip Murray and Haywood have decided to appoint an assistant to Haywood who will have direct charge of U. F. W. A. and who will, in effect, be the U. F. W. A. president. C. I. O. is said to be looking for an outstanding person who has the confidence of everyone who will lead U. F. W. A. along straight trade union lines.

Joseph Kovner, assistant general counsel of the C. I. O., is understood to be under consideration for the job. Right-wing U. F. W. A. members are telling a highly significant story about Kovner. They say that Lee Pressman, C. I. O. general counsel, who is generally described as a "left-winger," tried recently to fire Kovner, who is a "right-winger." Pressman, they say, was overruled by President Murray.

Paid U. F. W. A. officers aren't elected by the membership. They're appointed by the C. I. O. president. Right-winger Jacob Baker resigned as U. F. W. A. president last fall and Murray appointed Haywood to succeed him. Since that time Haywood has been busy directing an organization campaign and he has spent little time with U. F. W. A. That's the reason for appointing an assistant as active head of U. F. W. A. Since Haywood's appointment the union has been operated by Eleanor Nelson and the paid organizers.

Civil Service Commission yesterday made official, which already had been reported in this column, that after June 30 no appointment could be made to a Federal job without approval of the Civil Service Commission except in TVA, WPA Presidential appointments, assistant United States district attorneys, or unless the position is listed in Schedules A and B of the Civil Service rules. As a practical matter, however, the commission is likely to give many agencies that will be affected by the Ramspeck Act authority to continue to hire persons without merit status until it's in a position to supply eligibles to the thousands of new jobs that will be under its jurisdiction. It's probable that the commission will approve many appointments after June 30, subject to passing tests at later dates.

Robert L. McDougall has been appointed assistant commissioner of WPA. He has been a WPA regional director for Southern states and, more recently, he has worked on defense housing . . . Justin Hartzog of Massachusetts has been appointed special consultant to Housing Coordinator Palmer. He'll specialize on city planning.

Lodgings Sought Here For Soldiers

Defense Council Wants to House Men in School Gyms Over Weekends

The Commissioners and District school officials today will consider requests by the local Defense Council for use of school gymnasiums as emergency Saturday night lodging quarters for soldiers on weekend leave from camps in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

George Washington University, according to Welfare Director Robert Bondy, chairman of the welfare and consumer interest committee of the council, has already agreed to turn over its gymnasium to service men beginning tomorrow night. It will be available each Saturday night thereafter, Bondy added.

In addition, plans are under way to permit both Regular Army men and selectees to use 4-H Club tents and cots during periods before and after the group's annual summer encampment scheduled for June.

Park officials have granted permission to set up the tents tomorrow on the Monument Grounds.

Soldiers making use of the extra housing facilities will be charged a fee of 50 cents to provide for operating expenses and employment of sufficient help at the gymnasiums and tents.

Arrangements for the emergency lodging spaces are being handled by Bondy's subcommittee on housing under Maj. Charles Dodd, Salvation Army commander. Under tentative plans, the gymnasiums and tents would be operated by the Welfare and Recreation Association.

Because of the increasing number of service men coming into Washington to spend their weekend leaves, the council was asked by Army officials to find additional, low-cost sleeping quarters, Bondy declared.

He said some 200 men could be accommodated on the Monument grounds and an additional 125 at the George Washington gymnasium. Facilities also have been established at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines' Club at 1015 L Street Northwest for about 160 men.

Group Backs Whitehurst Traffic Plan

The Whitehurst highway survey report was indorsed "in principle" last night by the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association, but additional street projects in the organization's community were advocated.

H. W. Austin, president of the Southeast citizens group, gave a resume of the report and on his motion it was approved with the addition of a dozen other recommendations. They include the extension of Southern Avenue to Eastern Avenue to the Potomac River, as a by-pass for north and south traffic using the proposed tunnel to Alexandria, extension of Massachusetts Avenue from Fort Drive to the District Line and of Burns Street from East Capitol Street to the District Line.

In other resolutions, the association requested the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission to buy the Bennings Abbatoir site for possible use as a park or for a Government building and decided to conduct a survey in the community to list rooms for housing of defense workers.

Washington Highlands

The Whitehurst plan to relieve traffic congestion in the District was approved "in principle" by the Washington Highlands Citizens Association, meeting last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Wall, 3841 First Street Southeast.

The association indorsed President Roosevelt's call for observance of "I Am an American Day," May 18. The Postoffice Department was requested to substitute door-to-door mail delivery for street boxes and the District Health Department was asked to order removal of outside toilets not voluntarily removed by householders.

A nominating committee was appointed including Miss Bessie B. Warren, chairman; George Cannon, Mrs. Ida Lovejoy, Mrs. Libby Dobschultz and Ernest Price.

Midway

An increase in District public school facilities to meet the growing school attendance due to population increase was urged by the Midway Citizens' Association last night at a meeting in the Morgan Elementary School.

The association's educational committee, which presented a report after a recent conference with assistant superintendent of schools, Garnett C. Wilkinson, said that more teachers, school buildings as well as a new Miners Teachers College building were named as necessary by the school official.

A resolution was adopted to ask Congress for funds for school needs and also for additional recreation facilities in the northwest area.

Northeast Conference

The Northeast Citizens Conference adopted a resolution indorsing the view of Police Court Judge George D. Neilson favoring uniform penalties for traffic violations, vigorous prosecution of traffic law violators and other policies for reducing traffic accidents.

The action was taken at a meeting at the Twelfth Precinct Police Station after Judge Neilson had outlined his views in a talk to the representatives of Northeast Washington citizens associations.

Connecticut Avenue

Opposition to the Randolph bill to appoint a rent commission in the District was voted last night by the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association, meeting at All Souls' Church. The association, however, approved the principle of rent control during the defense emergency.

A sum of $100 from the association's treasury was voted for purchase of a baby defense bond.

APPLE BLOSSOM QUEEN CROWNED—Edward R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of the defense priorities board, crowns Mollie Foulkes Lee Queen Shenandoah XVIII

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Winchester, Va., May 1.—War's long shadow from over the Atlantic was as noticeable as the threatening rain clouds here this afternoon when Miss Mollie Foulkes Lee, New York college student, was crowned Queen Shenandoah XVIII before 10,000 persons.

The valley's stout old customer, England, which in the past bought much of the 40 per cent of exported apples from the region, was sung to by hundreds of costumed pupils of Handley High School in a pageant, "Our Heritage," following the coronation.

They sang mostly to the limestone earth that grows their apples, giving Winchester its commercial core; to the sun just slanting back up in the sky for summer, and to God who blesses the crops, but also their band played, "There'll always be an England," "Rule Britannia," and "God Save the King."

The war has struck their export apple business with a hurt worse than hail and drought. Businessmen talked of it at a stag luncheon for distinguished guests.

Miss Lee is a descendant of the Virginians by the name, an 18-year-old full cheeked brunette who carries her head high and talks in a steady, assured voice.

At the postoffice Gov. Price, of Virginia, waited for the queen and her party before making the first purchase of a defense bond in the State. Upon Miss Lee's arrival, Price bought an $18.75 bond, with a maturity value of $25 and presented it to the queen. Witnessing it was Ramsey S. Black, Third Assistant Postmaster General, of Washington. W. Nelson Page, Winchester's Postmaster, made the sale, signalizing purchases throughout the State.

Light Shower Falls

Except for the more than suggestion of a love for England which gave their city its name, the pageant was as in the 18 years past a long billowing of color on the wide high steps on the high school, the largest one-story high school in the United States. And scarcely had the queen come down the steps on the arm of E. R. Stettinius, priorities board chief in the OPM, who crowned her, than a few drops of rain fell.

It disturbed the crowd and 10,000 heads looked around for the place the cars had been parked. Miss Lee raised a white parasol.

But the rain drifted away.

The queen really wore something to have caught a lot of rain, had it come. There was her white satin bodice, long foaming satin dress hiding her toes and behind this a 15-foot satin train, carried by two princesses. On the golden throne, with a white satin back, the queen was given a golden apple and a golden wand. Then she was given Stettinius' arm and carrying her implements of fleeting royalty over a rich land of 6,000,000 barrels of York Imperials and Winesap apples, she walked to another golden throne to face a battery of cameras. From this throne, facing the steps, she witnessed the pageant.

Whole City Joins In

The festival was conceived, it is said, to show America, spectacularly, where its best apples come from. The whole city of about 9,000 population, helps in some way to make it a success. This year the Junior Board of Trade handled the arrangements, with general cooperation under Director General Tom Baldridge.

The second day of it, tomorrow, the parade day, will bring the biggest crowd. An estimated 100,000 visitors have been here on parade days.

Tonight the visiting firemen held a big torchlight parade. It wandered through the wide-flung dizziness of the evening.

Capital Civitans Will Be Hosts To Convention

Washington Civitans will play host to the District Convention of the Chesapeake Civitan International opening their convention here today at 10 a. m. in the Mayflower Hotel. Clubs from Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey and the District will be represented.

Representative William L. Nelson, of Missouri, will discuss current citizenship problems at a luncheon for all District Civitans at 1 p. m. today. His subject will be "The Challenge."

Feature of the convention is a banquet and dance beginning at 7:30 tonight. Speakers will include Don C. Rogers, of Chicago, Ill., international president of the Civitan.

Local delegates to the convention are Martin W. Hysong, president of the Washington Civitan Club, and John W. Hardell, first vice president.

Guppies to Puppies, Boys Club Exhibits Pets for Prizes

Seventy-five pets—they ranged from puppies to guppies—were on display last night at the "first annual mammoth pet show" of the Boys Club of Washington, Eastern Branch.

Owners of the pets, club members and two of their young girl friends paraded their charges around the gymnasium at the clubhouse, Seventeenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, to start the proceedings.

Then amid cheers and exhortations from the sidelines, the owners lined up their pets for judging. The list included: dogs, cats, rats, white rats, frogs, tadpoles, chicks, a parrot, a goldfish, and the aforementioned guppies (small fish).

In the dog class, winners were selected as follows: Handsomest, an Alaskan Spitz, owned by David Spitzer; funniest, dog of Robert Scott; largest, a Chesapeake retriever, of Robert Macon; smallest, a one-day-old fox terrier, of Charles Knee; dog with shortest tail, that owned by George Hollis; with longest tail, a collie, of Joseph Myles; most unusual, a Mexican Chihuahua, Jerry Bell's.

The guppy which Harry Gates brought to the show in a test tube won the prize for the smallest pet, while Buddy Simpson's frog was ajudged most unusual, and a rat owned by Joseph Kidwell was selected as the longest-tailed rat.

Winners were given blue ribbons, while those in second place received red ribbons, and others placing were given candy.

Legionnaires, Labor Mark May Day

Rep. Randolph Urges Air-Raid Protection for D. C., War on Bundists

An urgent call upon District citizens by a Congressman to demand protection of Washington against bombing in the "eventuality of war" and another by a union agent asking residents to fight aggression against labor, were among those heard at traditional May Day ceremonies here yesterday.

At the sixth annual memorial service held by the American Legion and other organizations at the District World War Memorial, Representative Jennings Randolph pleaded with listeners to investigate the totally unprepared state of the Capital's defense.

"I'm not an alasmist," the chairman of the House District Committee declared in his memorial speech for District World War dead. "But don't think for a single moment that any foreign country or countries with which America might be at war would hesitate to send a suicide squadron to bomb Washington, the Mall, or even this memorial."

The effect upon morale would be the reason for such bombing, he said.

In his address Representative Randolph asked residents to demand that "the men who govern this city of 1,000,000" take suitable steps for its protection. He also advocated a war referendum and urged deportation of all bund members.

Augustus E. Giegengack, United States Public Printer, presided. Legionnaires and affiliated members presented a massing of the colors and music was supplied by the Marine Band.

At Seventh and K Streets Northwest, the United May Day Committee—whose address is given in a circular as identical with that of the Communist Party in Washington—held a rally to gain support against the Vinson compulsory mediation bill now in Congress.

Postlude

Karzis' Voice Is Powerful

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Louis Karzis gives a song recital Thursday night in Pierce Hall, assisted by Jeno Sevely, violinist, and Reino Luoma, pianist. Program of songs by Giordani, Handel, Leoncavallo, Karreri, Leonardou, Schubert, Bohm and Speaks; violin pieces by Saint-Saens and Sarasate.

Rarely is the critic confronted by the particular kind of appraisal required in reviewing the song recital of Louis Karzis in Pierce Hall last evening. The usual standards of judgment have to be laid aside and replaced by a simple estimate of a natural vocal gift. There is no other way of approach to a singer whose confidence in his endowment is unshaken by any doubts about its artistic imperfections. One must regard such confidence with the respect that it merits.

Be it said, then, that Louis Karzis has one of the most powerful tenor voices that I have ever heard. Its sonority is apt for the opera house and not for a small auditorium. Did he use it with the aid of careful phrasing and gradation of tone, he might be an emulator of Enrico Caruso, but he sings as though completely oblivious of the niceties of technique.

His first group contained Giordani's "Caro mio ben," Handel's "Ombra mai fu" and "Care selve," and the aria, "Vesti la giubba" from "Pagliacci." Two Greek songs by Karreri and Leonardou were followed by Schubert's "The Wanderer," Brahm's "Still as the Night" and Speaks' "Elysium." In his delivery of them all, one was impressed solely by the amplitude and vigor of the voice.

Jeno Sevely, the assisting artist, gave skillful and enjoyable readings of Saint-Seans' "Rondo Capriccioso" and Sarasate's "Zigeunerweisen." After the latter, he was recalled for an extra number: Kreisler's prelude and allegro in the manner of Pugnani. Reino Luoma was the accompanist.

D. C. Marks Child Health Day; Need for Dental Care Stressed

LITTLE MAY QUEEN—Richard Baile, 13, of 1705 Trinidad Avenue Northeast, crowns his neighbor, Teresa Silverman, 11, Queen of the May at Wheatley School's festival. Teresa lives at 1730 Trinidad Avenue.

With emphasis on dental care in childhood as insurance against multiplying ills in later life, Child Health Day was observed in Washington yesterday by individuals and organizations concerned with welfare of growing children.

Paul V. McNutt, Federal Secruity Commissioner, speaking at a Child Health Day dinner at the Mayflower Hotel, pointed out that dental disease is the "most frequent single cause" for rejection on physical grounds of young men by the Army. In one community, he said, the Army reported that only three of 1,700 men inducted did not need some form of dental treatment.

"A boy with a toothache," he said, "has traditionally been merely a comic figure. But surely he has ceased to be a butt for jokes. Dental disease is no laughing matter; it is no matter for apathy or ignorance."

The prevalence of dental ailments among the Nation's young men, McNutt declared, is found "because people do not have access to proper professional care; because they cannot pay for such care; but also because they do not know the facts, do not understand the seriousness of the risk and the damage it can do to themselves and their children."

At the same banquet, Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, called attention to the need for proper prenatal care. Responsibility for such care, she said, begins at home, but reaches out into the community itself.

"For the development and maintenance of community services for promoting the health of mothers and children, every citizen shares responsibility. Discharge of this responsibility involves payment of taxes and contribution to agencies supported by Community Chests or other private funds; study of the resources of the community for maternal and child health, and advocacy of measures necessary to develop a well-rounded, effective program."

Also speaking at last night's dinner were Dr. Martha M. Eliot, associate chief of the Children's Bureau, on "Planning This Year for Child Health;" Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, director of the bureau of maternal and child welfare in the District Health Department, on "Child Health in the District of Columbia," and Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, who summarized the significance of Child Health Day.

In a radio broadcast during the afternoon under auspices of the American Legion Auxilary, Miss Lenroot called attention to the intensified maternal and child health problems brought about by the defense program. These, she said, include not only those incident to movements of families into cantonment and industrial areas, but those created by men leaving small towns and rural sections.

Low-cost nursery schools in Washington to care for children of working mothers was advocated by Mrs. Frances Mayfarth, editor of Childhood Education, in a radio broadcast sponsored by the Washington Assembly of C. I. O. Auxiliaries. She pointed out that in Washington "there are more employed mothers per capita population than in any other city in the country."

The celebration at Children's Hospital took the form of a benefit performance by clowns, dancers and trained animals of the Johnny Jones Exposition. Nearly 100 boys and girls, seated on the verandas, watched the show presented in the court below.

Nine District Bills Passed By Senate

Measure Making Reckless Drivers Financially Liable Goes to White House

In rapid-fire order the Senate yesterday passed seven District bills previously approved by the House, including a measure to bring motorists convicted of reckless driving within the provisions of the Financial Responsibility Act.

The Senate also approved two District bills on which there has been no final House action.

Under existing law, motorists convicted of drunken driving or of leaving the scene of an accident in which there has been personal injury are denied renewal of their driving permits unless they are insured for financial responsibility. The bill passed by the Senate would put reckless drivers in the same category.

Stolen Goods Bill Passed

Authorize steam to be furnished District buildings from the Central Heating Plant.

Authorize the Federal Security administrator to accept gifts for Freedmen's Hospital.

More Cadets From D. C. Voted

The Senate also passed and sent to the House bills to increase from five to nine the number of cadets which may be appointed from the District to West Point and to authorize the Pennsylvania Railroad to underpass New York Avenue Northeast and construct industrial sidetracks nearby.

The railroad bill, as passed, carried an amendment proposed by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, aimed at preserving the right of the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate the proposed development and issue a certificate of convenience and necessity.

Dr. Williams, Methodist Leader, Dies

Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the West Washington District of the Methodist Church, Baltimore Conference, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 1607 Allison Street Northwest.

Dr. Williams

Among the city's outstanding religious leaders, Dr. Williams was stricken ill on Wednesday night while conducting a quarterly conference at Foundry Methodist Church.

Out of respect to him, the annual dinner of the Methodist Union, scheduled for tonight at the Willard Hotel, has been postponed indefinitely. He was the union's executive secretary.

Dr. Williams began his ministry at Woodside Methodist Church, Silver Spring. He subsequently filled pulpits at Lincoln Road and Petworth churches here; Falls Church, Va., and from 1922 to 1935 had served as pastor of Calvary Church in Frederick, Md., where a new church was erected during his ministry.

He came here in 1936 as superintendent of the entire Washington District, and when Methodist Unification in 1939 resulted in a division of Washington into two districts, he became superintendent of the West Washington district.

Native of Lonaconing, Md., he was educated in the public schools of Allegheny County; Williamsport-Dickinson Seminary, Williamsport, Pa., and George Washington University here. He received a D. D. degree from St. John's College, Annapolis, in 1922.

Dr. Williams was a delegate to the last General Methodist Conference at Atlantic City and had served on many boards and committees of the denomination. He was a member of the board of trustees of Sibley Memorial Hospital, American University and the Swartzell Home for Children.

He is survived by his wife, the former Mildred Marguerite Hanson, whom he married in 1913, and two sons—Gladstone E. jr., of Jackson, Miss., and Don Hanson, of this city.

The funeral will be held on Sunday at 3 p. m. at Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest.

Bannockburn Club Employe Dies

Hans Buchner, 52, houseman at the Bannockburn Club, collapsed early yesterday while at work in the office of the club and was pronounced dead a short time later by Dr. C. E. Hawks, Montgomery County medical examiner. Death was due to a heart condition, Dr. Hawks said.

Rep. Folger's Death Mourned By Congress

Both houses of Congress adopted resolutions of mourning yesterday over the death Wednesday night of Representative A. D. (Lon) Folger, 53, who was serving his second term from North Carolina's Fifth District.

In the Senate and House arrangements were made to send Representatives to attend the funeral of Mr. Folger, fatally hurt in an auto accident near his home at Mount Airy. House Speaker Rayburn named Representatives Doughton, Weaver, Kerr and Clark, all of North Carolina, as a funeral delegation.

Vice President Wallace designated Senators Bailey and Reynolds, of North Carolina, to represent the Senate at the funeral this afternoon, but neither will be able to attend.

Bailey, as chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, is presiding over hearings on ship seizure legislation and Reynolds is to preside over a meeting of the Senate Military Affairs Committee as acting chairman.

The House adjourned immediately out of respect for Folger upon receiving formal notice of his death. Representative Doughton, dean of the North Carolina delegation, told the House that Folger's death "brought to a tragic end a most useful and faithful career."

Representative Folger, an attorney, had been a member of the Democratic National Committee since 1936. He also had served as trustee of the State University and as a superior court judge.

He is survived by his widow and two sons.

Sergt. Foley

Members of both Houses of Congress are expected to attend the funeral of the 68-year-old police veteran, who spent his last years on the force "detailed" on Capitol Hill.

Foley was appointed mounted policeman July 4, 1896. He was injured in a fall from his mount in 1910 and was dismounted. He was promoted to detective sergeant in 1927.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mary E. Foley, and one son, William A. Foley.

Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mrs. Offterdinger, Clubwoman, to Be Buried Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Alice Templeton Offterdinger, 74, who died suddenly Tuesday of a heart attack, will be held at 9:30 a. m. today in the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Offterdinger, the widow of Henry T. Offterdinger, local cigar manufacturer, died in her home at 1627 Kennedy Place Northwest.

Born in Vermont, she had moved to Washington shortly before her marriage. At the time of her death, she was a member of the Dolly Madison Chapter, D. A. R., the Sixteenth Street Women's Literary Club and the Vermont State Association.

She is survived by three sons, Theodore T., Frederick and Harold P. Offterdinger, and two daughters, Mrs. Anita O. Spain and Mrs. Mildred O. Brooke, all of Washington. Also surviving are a brother, Fred Templeton, of Vermont, and a sister, Miss Blanche Templeton, of Washington.

SHOREHAM DISCOVERY. Max Lowe, Shoreham's amusement manager and a keen talent connoisseur, is in one of his rare spells of enthusiasm over barytone Barrington Sharma who opens in the Blue Room on May 12. Young Mr. Sharma, is of Hindu and Italian descent, but lives with his father on their Maryland estate, he is rapidly becoming a true Marylander. Max pronounces the Sharma barytone to be be one of the finest . . . Manor and Mignon, super-polished ballroom dancers now completing their twelfth week at Manhattan's Havana-Madrid, will debut in the Shoreham on Monday . . . If you attend the Shoreham's luncheon fashion show tomorrow, you will be dazzled by an evening gown-bathing suit. When the skirt is removed, it becomes a swim suit. Lovely for midnight dips or walking home from a yachting party.

Carmen Cavallaro's birthday is next Tuesday and the Carlton management will give a miniature "Birthday Ball" in the Cosmos Room in his honor. There will be an ornate birthday cake, and loads of the novelties and noise-makers that go with a gala fete.

THE JUNIOR SOCIAL REGISTER dominates the Lounge Riviera picture. The young Ned McLeans and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Rodenburg (former Anne Kiess, of the Stork Club), who all live at Hotel 2400, are in and out constantly. Nancy Hoskinson and James M. E. O'Grady will also make their home at "2400" after their wedding and probably be in Riviera more than ever. Nancy Strong, this spring's Cherry Blossom Queen, was in to say her goodbys before leaving Washington. And we saw that inseparable twosome, Patricia Prochnik and Tinsley Adams, dancing to Pete Macias' newest tunes. P. S. Organist Ida Clarke has been doubly busy this week helping her brother-in-law, E. Lawrence Phillips, owner of the Johnny Jones Exposition, to select an electric organ for his show.

HURRY, HURRY, HURRY to the Trioka. For Helen Hamilton has decided to close for the season on May 24. That gives you very little time to enjoy its brilliant and nationally known revue and peerless beef Stroganoff. We saw G-Man Edgar Hoover there the other eve sitting eside a pretty lady with a hat of red flowers.

ROMANCE COMES TO HI HAT. Hardy Franks, bassist with Jimmy Summerville's Four M's at Hi Hat, has just been married to Rita Smith, Washington girl he met four months ago. Rita is now with the nurses' examining board, but many folks will remember her as playing piano with the Eastern High School orchestra in the same year that Dennis Calvert, Hi Hat's assistant manager, was banging the bass with those young hopefuls.

Glen Echo's Paul Kain is learning to be an aviator, and beginning to solo after a hundred hours with his instructors who say he is a natural born aviator with drawn steel nerves.

VERSATILITY, INC. That's Neptune Room diversion. Even those hard-boiled cynics, the visiting band leaders, can't get over the way that Joe Collins and his Mad Hatters sweep lightninglike from pure jive to masterly renditions of the classics of Brahms, Grieg and Schubert . . . As for those dynamic pianists, Bob and Bertie Hellman, they are so established in Washington affections that for weeks their entire programs have consisted of request numbers. Their latest notable visitor was Paul McNutt who asked for the University of Indiana song.

PRESIDENTIAL DEDICATION. The King Cole Trio at Paul Young's have dedicated their new recording hit, "Gone With the Draft" to President Roosevelt. There'll be hearty laughs in the White House when this killer-diller is played.

PITY BYRON HENRY of Jack Coffey's Metronome Room orchestra. Last week he was dressed up as "Alexander the Swoose." This week he is bundled inside the covered tea-wagon that's wheeled around for the "Inflammation, Please" quiz. By the time he waves that white hankie of surrender, we understand he is on the point of suffocation.

GYPSY SYMPHONIST. Bob Straszny, whose gypsy music group delights Plymouth patrons, played in the New York Symphony under Damrosch, and with the Cincinnati Symphony when Fritz Reiner directed. He is also a member of the Washington Symphony and was one of its earliest organizers.

ABOUT LOVELY LASSES. Lucille Lincoln, handwriting expert of the Anchor Room, has received both radio and Government offers since she came to Washington a few weeks ago . . . Warbling Lina D'Acosta, of the Silver Fox says she will never run out of good fortune as long as she wears that necklace hung with dozens of lucky charms . . . A generous patron of Restaurant "823" has offered a building lot to violinist Jane Marlow as a wedding present when she gets married. (And it looks as though she will, and soon.) . . . Patricia, Madrillon's pretty cigarette girl, is wearing a new topaz ring about an inch square and says her boy friend is the nicest person . . . For the biggest, blackest and brightest eyes in town, it is a tie between Cecilia, of Ciro's Famous Village and Nell Deacon, of Kavakos' Grill.

The Rainbow Room has been overflowing with Chamber of Commerce delegates all week, looks like a composite picture of the American Business Man. The meeting of the Minneapolis Civic Association also wound up with much adjourning to Rainbow.

BUSY MONDAYS. Though the Nightingale is closed on Mondays, they are still busy days for Dodd Raffell's orchestra, always booked on that night for sorority and fraternity dances.

SHORT STORIES. Music for some of the matchless Mexican dances being done in La Salle Versailles by Jose and Paquita, was written for them by Medina Sousa, famed Mexican composer and symphony conductor . . . Ray Nelson, who used to play bass with Jack Shaffer's band at the Casino Royal, will join the Army on May 9 . . . Don Carper's Four at Cafe Caprice are dressing up for the warm weather in white coats and green slacks . . . So many Congressmen come into the Mayflower Lounge that Maestro Dick Koons thinks he will write a theme song in compliment to them . . . Mayfair's Gentlemen of Rhythm love to go to fires, but were sadly disappointed the other afternoon when a nearby blaze fizzled . . . Russ Cullen, of the Pall Mall Room, occupies his spare time building houses over in Virginia. First thing he knows, he will be a real estate magnate instead of a singing saxophonist . . . You will find Evelyn Knight singing at lunch time tomorrow in the Nat King Cole Room.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Ill., May 1.—A Pacific Coast League tag on a ball player is no longer a label of quality, it seems. In fact, baseball men are beginning to look with dark suspicion on the Pacific Coast heroes who come up to the majors stabbed as sure-fire big leaguers. It has been a discouraging story of promise unfulfilled, for the most part.

POVICH

A shining exception is the DiMaggio family—Joe, Dominic and Vince, which has provided three big league clubs with brilliant centerfielders, but the DiMaggios are a tribe apart. They would have graduated with honors from any league. That they merely happened to be born in California was a break for the Coast League community.

Both the American and National League are having another painful experience this season with a pair of the Coast-League hot-shots. Manager Bucky Harris today felt constrained to bench George Archie, the Coast League's most valuable player of last season because he wasn't hitting big league pitching and was not exactly robbing anybody of base hits. The Chicago Cubs are having even a more horrible time with Lou Novikoff, the mad Russian, who came out of the Coast League this spring with a "can't-miss" label. Novikoff, home run king of the Coast and owner of a .356 batting average out there last season, is hitting a feeble .175 for the Cubs and as of this afternoon he was sitting on the bench where he could do the Cubs the least damage. Somehow, the Cubs' stepchild hasn't been able to hit big league pitching.

Rating of Coast League Flattering

The gulf between major league and minor league pitching has always been very well defined, but for several years now the theory has been that the Pacific Coast League has been flattered by its AA rating. Baseball men have long felt that Coast League baseball does not compare with the International and American Association in caliber despite its double A classification, and in fact it is argued that the Coast League is no faster a circuit than the Texas or Southern Associations.

The Nats had another disastrous experience with a Coast Leaguer a few years ago. They swung a three-cornered deal with the Indians and White Sox which brought to the Washington Club a pitcher named Jack Salveson. That season he had won 20 games on the Coast. He had been the property of the White Sox. The Nats took him to Florida and immediately wondered how in heaven he had managed to win 20 games in an AA league. Salveson had little on the ball, and the Nats released him during the training season. Bucky Harris' opinion of Coast League ball took a deep drop on the theory that if Salveson could win 20 games in any league, that league was not a very good league. The Cubs finally bought Salveson from Washington but they didn't give him a Cub uniform. They sent him direct to their Los Angeles farm. He was strictly a Pacific Coast League pitcher.

And speaking of Coast League pitching, as we seem to be, we seem to recall at this time that when old Hollis Thurston discovered himself washed-up as a big league pitcher he went out to the Coast, turned outfielder, and led that league in hitting.

Paul Strand Proved Failure

Not entirely of recent date is the history of Coast League flops. Eighteen years ago, Connie Mack paid $75,000 for Paul Strand, .375-hitting outfielder from Salt Lake City. He couldn't buy a hit in the big leagues and was a first-class bust. The Washington club had a chance to buy Strand, but scout Joe Engel passed him up because he didn't like his batting stroke. Clark Griffith wondered if Engel hadn't made a mistake. When the Athletics were playing an exhibition game with Washington in the South, and Griffith was on the grounds, Engel felt himself squarely on the spot. He sought out Walter Johnson who was pitching for the Nats that day.

"Listen, Walter," said Engel, "that Strand is in the A's lineup today and Griffith thinks I should have bought him. I'm going to look bad if that guy gets any hits. Bear down on him out there for me today, will ya?" Johnson said he would. He did bear down a bit. He struck out Strand three times. Just to save Engel any embarrassment.

At last accounts, George Archie, the hottest article in Coast League ball last season, was batting a puerile .259 for Washington. Mickey Vernon who learned his baseball in the Sally and International Leagues has taken over Archie's first base job and it threatens to be permanent. . . .

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 1.—Big, freckled Don Budge is back in town winding up his annual professional tennis tour and also winding up his career as a bachelor. He will be married to Deirdre Conselman, daughter of the creator of Ella Cinders, May 26 in Chicago. The pro tour of which he was a part ends May 10 after a good enough season which will see one of its stars, Alice Marble, clear about $30,000.

CONSIDINE

Budge motored to Atlantic City yesterday with Miss Marble, Bill Tilden, Mary Hardwick and Eleanor Tennant and gave perhaps the biggest tennis clinic of all time. All the strokes and science of the game were explained to the annual convention of physical education teachers.

The Budge-Tilden-Marble-Hardwick-Tennant group isn't one to beat a dollar away with a stick, but nonetheless during this tour it did more to spread the gospel of the game than any corp of amateurs ever did. It conducted free clinics everywhere the tour took them, and it missed few cities.

Budge is so far the best tennis player in the world that watching him play has long since become an exhibition of skill rather than a contest. At present he has played Tilden 55 matches and beaten that remarkable old gaffer 50 times. Marble has lost only three times to Hardwick in about as many matches.

"When he decides to get off that dime," Budge told us, speaking of Tilden, "he can still play some pretty amazing tennis. Bill's 48 years old, you know, but those times he beat me he really beat me. There wasn't any laying down on my part, either. He just began to move around as he must have done in the early nineteen twenties, when nobody could touch him. Took the play away from me, hit harder and truer than I can, and made me look like a sap. He beat me six-one, six-one in Dallas; what's you think of that?

"But win or lose, Bill's been a great show. Let me tell you what happened in Toronto. You never see a guy beef very much in tennis if a linesman is making mistakes on the other guy's shots. Do you? But Bill did. I had hit three or four good ones in that Toronto match. They were pretty plainly in the court, but each time the Lineman said 'Out' well, I didn't care. But Tilden was indignant, even though he was the fellow the lineman was helping.

"Finally he stopped the play and said to the umpire, 'I want that lineman removed.' Well, you know about the good neighbor policy, and all that, but darn near everybody there in the stands stood up and began booing Bill. But it didn't stump him a bit. He walked over to the umpire's chair, took the loudspeaker and made a speech. He said:

"'Ladies and gentlemen: I believe that the usual British custom is not to condemn a man until he has been proven wrong. For your information I'm not defending myself. I'm here defending Don Budge against this atrocious officiating. This linesman has been wrong so often that he should be removed, not only for the good of Budge but for the good of the match. I don't know just what you want to see, but I have an idea that it is a fair match, where each man has the benefit of accurate officiating. As it is now, I'm getting all the breaks, and it's just not fair."

"At the end there wasn't a peep out of the gallery. He's quite a guy, that Tilden. No thought of quitting the game, at 48, and still able to beat anybody, if he decides to get off the dime."

Budge, Tilden, Fred Perry, new United States Open tennis champion, and either Keith Gledhill or Les Stoefen will be the singles players in the professional round robin tournament to be played next month at Forest Hills for the benefit of the British war relief. In the doubles, Budge will pair with Perry, Tilden with Vincent Richards (United States doubles champions in 1921 and 1922), Stoefen will team up with George Lott and Gledhill's partner will be Bruce Barnes. This tournament will mark one of the few times that admitted professionals have been permitted to play at Forest Hills. Ellsworth Vines, who renounced tennis for golf, may also appear, golf having renounced him.

Threatening Weather Looms for Derby

Off Track Would Aid Colt Swain

11 Expected to Run For Wreath of Roses; Market Wise in Best Workout

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Louisville, Ky., May 1.—With the beautiful Ohio at a peaceful stage there's no need for the song "River Stay Away From My Door" but the Kentucky Hardboots are going about their evening chores humming "Rain, Stay Away From Our Derby." I rolled into this carnival city early this afternoon in time to find Col. Matt Winn, Old Mr. Derby himself, rather uneasy about the threat of falling weather. Although the sun is shining on the closing stages of a run-of-the-mine program, there is a haze around the horizon that seems in keeping with the Weather Bureau forecast of "local showers" for Saturday's Derby Day.

HAIGHT

As this is written, the track is all that the time-worn rating of "lightning fast" implies. Today's times are creditable and workouts this morning, for the most part, showed the oval had been excellently groomed during a week of fair weather. However, turf experts and the regular and occasional Derbyites are glancing now and then at mud form, just to be on the safe side.

While most of the handlers of Derby hopes are trying to be nonchalant about the possibility of an off track, Trainer C. E. Durnell is smiling cheerfully. He is the conditioner of Swain, the colt that Jockey Johnny Gilbert won with in the mud at Havre de Grace. If it rains pitchforks from now until dark Saturday night, Durnell will be happy. He shipped Cleveland Putnam's colt here as a rain horse and is praying he will get mud.

Trainer Tom Smith just shrugged his shoulders when we talked of a bad track. He changed the subject in a manner which seemed to say, "What of it?"

Field of 11 Expected

With the filing of entries due to begin at 7 a. m. tomorrow morning, there was every indication that a field of 11 would be named, unless some owner puts in one of those "just for the thrill" horses which have popped up in other years, generally to be scratched before post time. The "big four" of the Derby field, Porter's Cap, Our Boots, Whirlaway and Blue Pair, is solid. Regardless of track conditions, handlers of these horses say they will place entries and their charges will run. Market Wise, Robert Morris, Dispose, Little Beans, Staretor, Valdina Paul and Swain also have the stamp of approval of their owners.

Only four members of the field were on the track this morning and Market Wise turned in the best workout. The surprise winner of the Wood Memorial had his trial along with Robert Morris, another New York invader. Market Wise, the "Cinderella horse" of the gang, stepped 6 furlongs in 1:14 1-5. An outsider added to his prestige as the Derby hour approached. The Valdina Farm's Valdina Paul stepped five-eighths in 1:00 3-5.

Porter's Cap also made his final appearance for serious purposes be-

Vernon Beats Julius Solters' Throw to Third Base

Chicago's 8 Hits Nicely Scattered

Nat Shortstop, Hitting Mere .571, Smashes Home Run And Two Doubles

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Chicago, May 1.—The Nats reformed today. They came up with twin heroes in Dutch Leonard and Cecil Travis, and won a ball game—a smart 7-to-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox. It was a breeze. Leonard simply held the White Sox in the grip of his shut-out pitching, and Travis knocked the runs around.

They were checking a Chicago winning streak at five straight, incidentally, and they halted Pitcher Bill Dietrich's private little winning streak at three in a row. Leonard, who was seeking his first victory of the season, outpitched Dietrich. Travis saw to that.

The lanky Georgia boy who is the league's leading hitter at this point with a .571 average was kind of wonderful today. He doubled in the first inning and scored the Nats' first run. The Nats' second run was an exclusive Travis effort, taking the form of a terrific blast into the upper deck of right center—his first homer of the year. Washington's third run was also a Travis contribution, resulting from a long fly off his bat. Washington's fourth run, it seems, was also driven home by Travis. It seems he doubled to the centerfield wall in the eighth for his third extra base hit of the game.

Vernon Makes Debut

It was a shining debut for Buck Harris' new left-handed hitting lineup that resulted from yesterday's drastic shake-up in which George Archie, Jimmy Bloodworth and Johnny Welaj were benched. Six left-handed hitters in a row faced Chicago pitching today. For young Mickey Vernon it was an impressive debut. Vernon made two of the Nats' eight hits, including a ninth inning three-bagger that was loaded with two runs.

The Nats played errorless ball.

Yanks Ruin Browns by 14-to-5 Score

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 1.—The New York Yankees, topping their 14-hit offensive of yesterday, buried the St. Louis Browns, 14 to 5, with a 17-hit attack led by Charlie Keller.

King Kong hit a three-run homer and a triple and drove in exactly half of the Yankees' runs. Joe Gordon made four hits and Bill Dickey and Red Rolfe three each.

Pitcher Ernest (Tiny) Bonham was the only Yankee who didn't collect a safety, but he did his part by holding the Browns to eight hits.

Feller Sets Down A's For Cleveland, 13-8

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 1.—The Cleveland Indians' flashed power at the plate as well as on the mound today with Bobby Feller snatching the glory for both as he set down the Philadelphia Athletics, 13 to 8.

It wasn't enough that the Indians broke out in their heaviest hitting spree of the season. Feller staged a field day all by himself.

The young speedballer batted in four of the Tribe's runs, one of them a fifth inning homer—the second of his major league career. In the same inning, he recorded his 1,000th strikeout by fanning Jack Knott, the opposing pitcher until that frame.

Feller went on to run his strikeout total to 1,002, or seven for the game, while yielding eight hits.

Homers by Ben McCoy and Bob Johnson drove in six of the A's eight runs. After Knott went to the showers in the fifth, A. R. Johnson and Herman Besse finished on the mound for Philadelphia, but the starter was charged with the loss.

Nats' Lefties Get Another Chance Today

Chicago, May 1.—Bucky Harris' left-handed hitting line-up will get another workout tomorrow at St. Louis in the opener of a two-game series with the Browns . . . The Nats will face the right-handed pitching of under-handed Elden Auker, an 18-game winner with the Browns last year . . . There is more than a suspicion that George Archie may not regain the first base job Jimmy Vernon took over today . . . George Case isn't hitting a lick, and hasn't stolen a base this season, but he won't be benched because Harris rates him as a fine ball player who will get his share of hits . . . Dutch Leonard threw fewer knuckle balls today than in any game he has pitched for the Nats this season . . . he was thrilled by the speed of his fast ball and used his knuckler only when he was in a hole . . . Travis continued to be the problem child of the league's outfielders . . . today he doubled down the first base line, hit a home run to right center, doubled to left center and banged a long, run-producing fly to deep left . . . Travis is still running a slight temperature after his ptomaine attack, but his batting average has caught a high fever . . . White Sox pitchers had gone the route in 11 of 13 games until the Nats sent Dietrich to the showers today . . . Rookie Umpire Joe Rue booted one by a dozen feet when he called Cramer out on Knickerbocker's throw to first in the fifth inning . . . the throw pulled Joe Kuhel that far off the bag. POVICH.

Reds' Walters Halts Dodger Streak, 2 to 1

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 1.—Bucky Walters, the imperturbable, stopped the winning streak of the Brooklyn Dodgers today with his grandest display of courageous pitching and timely hitting for a 2 to 1, eleven-inning victory by the world champion Cincinnati Reds.

The triumph of the Reds snapped a nine-game string of victories by the Dodgers and came exactly a year to the day after this same Walters, a one-time third baseman for the Phillies, ended Brooklyn's similar nine-game streak at the start of the 1940 season.

Today's tense struggle, played before a chilled crowd of 18,639, was a duel of skill and strategy, not only between Walters and lanky Curt Davis, but between the two managers and the two infields.

The Reds came through like the masters they are at winning tight battles and it was Walters, who scored his own winning run.

Walters Singles in Eleventh

With two out in the eleventh, he shot a liner into center field and, to the amazement of everybody, stretched the hit into a double with a daring slide into second ahead of the throw. Lonnie Frey drew an intentional pass and then Eddie Joost smacked out his third single of the game, to bring Walters flying home.

But it was Walters' beautiful pitching in the pinches at the close of the game that held the fans in their seats despite the fact that the temperature dropped from 67 to 51 during the game.

Joe Krakauskas Sent to Syracuse By Cleveland

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., May 1.—The Syracuse Chiefs of the International Baseball League announced tonight the acquisition on option from the Cleveland Indians of Joe Krakauskas, left-hand fast ball pitcher. He will join the Chiefs immediately.

KRAKKY

Earlier the Syracuse Club announced it had purchased Lindel Stortz from Minneapolis of the American Association.

Krakauskas, a veteran of four seasons in the major leagues, came on a 24-hour option. He went to Cleveland last winter from Washington, but has seen little activity with the Indians this spring. With Washington, Krakauskas won 2 and lost 29 games in four seasons.

Frizzell-Webb Golf Victors

Pair Captures Low Gross At Columbia

Dr. Webb, McKee Take Low Putt Honors With 27; New Hole Opened

The last foursome off the course, which beat the late rain and darkness by just a few moments, accounted for the major honors as more than 250 Columbia Country Club members celebrated opening day yesterday with a varied program.

Paul J. Frizzell and Tommy Webb, jr., former club champion, played alternate shots for 18 holes and posted a fine three-over par round of 73 to win low gross in the Scotch foursome play. In the same foursome, Tommy's dad, Dr. T. D. Webb, and Craig McKee used only 27 putts to win low-putting honors by a single stroke.

The day also marked the opening of the new first hole, which now stretches straightaway from the clubhouse to a well-trapped green some 376 yards distant, in place of the old dog-leg number. Professional Fred McLeod and Robert H. Gardner officially opened the hole by playing two balls each in the morning, McLeod using a driver and two-iron and snaring two pars, while Gardner posted a four and a bogey five. The new sixth green, to the right and a few yards short of the old one, was also put into play for the first time.

Pair 6 Over Par

Two disappointed defending champions watched the 73 of Frizzell and Webb take over low honors Don Kneesi and Gene Krewson, who won last year with a 76 using only four clubs, went 6 over par on the first five holes yesterday, but finished with a 76 that stood up until the last foursome reported.

Columbia's golfing members turned out en masse for the inaugural tournament and several prominent tandems were among the also-rans, including Fred McLeod and W. W. Hinshaw; Roland MacKenzie and Hugh Reilly, Martin F. McCarthy and Dave Morris; Martin R. West and George Miller; Ray Swearingen and Don Buckingham, and Maury Nee and John Dodge.

Three teams deadlocked for low net in the Scotch foursome play, Kneesi and Krewson with 76-8, 68; L. P. McLachlen and Dr. J. P. Sherer, 86-18, 68, and J. T. Money and H. C. Ames with the same score. Play was alternate drives and alternate shots, with all handicapping under the fine hand of D'Arcy Banagan.

Low Net to Rohrs, Edminster

Low net score on the first nine went to F. A. Rohrs and L. R. Edminster, 42-10, 32, while on the back nine James L. Quinn and Frank Bell, with 40-8, 32, deadlocked Kneesi and Krewson with 36-4, 32.

McKee chipped in from 20 yards off the sixteenth green to help his side win putting honors for Albert R. MacKenzie and Dr. Paul M. Stewart, president of the D. C. Golf Association, were already in with 28 putts. The latter team also scored 78—8, 70.

Frizzell and young Webb dropped three consecutive threes on the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth to post the winning score in the gross competition. The 27 putts of Dr. Webb and McKee was all the more remarkable when a three-putter on the tenth was figured.

The outstanding team count of the night was a 1,723 count by Sherer's Men's Shop.

FORT DAVIS

The Commercial League at the new Fort Davis drives had its inaugural last night with Eddie Hutchinson, Melvin Motors, leading for individual highs with 148 and 388. The Weitzel and McCarthy's teams split the highs for quintets, the former with a 592 game and the latter with a 1,695 count for set.

Fishing with JACK BELL

At last the first of the spring run of hardheads have made their appearance . . . Honga River over on the Eastern Shore of Maryland is the hot spot. The Honga River is reached best by getting a boat at Solomons Island or other places near the mouth of the Putuxent River.

JACK BELL

Solomons Island, Md., (69 miles from Washington), may be reached, via Pennsylvania Avenue and route 4. Turn right at Drury, follow route 416 to intersection with route 2. Follow latter to Solomons Island.

I shall not attempt to tell you how to catch them. A piece of shrimp or peeler crab on the hook dropped on the bottom and then.

Now that we are rounding out for fish in the Chesapeake Bay, it may be advisable that you obtain a copy of "Sport Fishing in the Chesapeake Bay," circular No. 1, which may be obtained upon request and free of charge from the Office of Superintendent of Documents, 45 G Street Northwest.

White Perch fishing has fallen off during the week in the Potomac River. This is due to the run of herring which have shown up in numbers.

There is still hook and line fishing to be had, always a chance of picking up a big rockfish.

Sid Atlas, had hold of a whopper Tuesday morning, while fishing for perch. Said it looked like a porpoise.

First catches of channel bass at Cape Hatteras were reported last weekend, when a party trolling around Hatteras Inlet took 47 drum averaging 28 pounds. First big catches of rockfish were reported from Pimlico and Roanoke Rivers, N. C.

The Bermuda wahoo record of 91½ pounds was broken April 21 when Maurice A. Martin of Vancouver took a 95 pounder on a 16 ounce tip, 24 thread line and white feather lure.

The ice is out on New Hampshire's principal lakes and ponds and the landlocked salmon and lake trout fishing is in full swing. It won't be long before Washington anglers will be making tail for points in Maine for landlocked salmon and native brook trout.

Anglers can now weigh the big one that gets away, for corroboration of his incredible tale. A new rod will soon be on the market with a built in scale just forward of the reel in a new invention recently patented.

The line passes from the reel through a tube in the scale, which is provided with a clutch arrangement to take hold of the line when desired by the angler. Thus, if you can keep your fish hooked long enough, you can weigh it—even if it manages to get away. Now we shall know how big the "big one is that gets away."

Trout fishing in Maryland should be at its best over the weekend. Fishing Creek was stocked on Friday of last week and very few fish have been taken during the week.

Big Hunting Creek also was stocked heavily this week in preparation for the Jungle Cock Camp Fire meeting starting

Redinger Hurls Colonials to 6-2 Victory Over U. of Virginia

Cavaliers' Bill Harman Is Beaten

G. W. Hurler Gets Home Run; Three Runs in Fourth Puts Game on Ice

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., May 1.—Air-tight pitching by Jack Redinger, coupled with perfect support, enabled George Washington to defeat Virginia here today, 6 to 2. The Cavaliers had ten men stranded.

The Colonials collected eight hits off Bill Harman, Cavalier twirler, including a circuit smash by Redinger, a triple by Oertel, and a triple and double by McNeil.

In the first inning, Oertel opened with a slashing three bagger and counted on Sokol's long fly to left field.

Following Redinger's clout over the leftfield fence in the third frame, the Colonials put the game on ice in the fourth by bunching three hits with an error for a trio of runs. McNeil opened with a single, and when Dodson misjudged Picco's drive, both men tallied. Gudmundson scored a moment later on Redinger's second hit.

Pirates Blast Philadelphia, Win, 15 to 2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 1.—The cellar dwelling Pittsburgh Pirates gave the Phillies an overdose of their own medicine today when they blasted three Phils pitchers for 23 hits and a 15-to-2 triumph, their first in four games.

Frankie Frisch sent seven left-handed batters into the Pirate line-up against Si Johnson, who withdrew in the third inning. The Bucs got six runs in that frame off Johnson, and Ike Pearson and added four more in the fourth off Pearson and Roy Bruner.

Red Sox Rout 3 Tiger Hurlers To Win, 15-9

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 1.—The Boston Red Sox salvaged one game from the set of three with the Detroit Tigers today with a merciless attack on three pitchers, including Tommy Bridges, for a 15 to 9 decision.

Bridges, winner of his two previous starts, lasted only one inning, giving up five runs in the first, and the Red Sox made life miserable for two successors, Dizzy Trout and Hal White. Jim Tabor's three-run double in the first was the telling blow against Bridges.

Frank Pytlak hit a double and three singles and Dom Dimaggio four singles. Earl Johnson, 22-year-old Red Sox southpaw, stayed in until a last Detroit rally in the ninth when Les Fleming relieved him.

Warneke Hurls 9-Hit Shutout; Cards Win, 5-0

By the Associated Press

New York, May 1.—The first-place St. Louis Cardinals made a clean sweep of their three-game series with the Giants today as veteran Lonnie Warneke pitched a nine-hit shutout and, with home runs by Martin Marion and Jimmy Brown to help him along, gained a 5-to-0 decision.

The four-baggers accounted for four of the winner's runs. Brown hit his in the third off Carl Hubbell after Marion had singled, and Marion clouted one off Walter Brown in the eighth with Gus Mancuso on base. A single by Ernie Koy, a walk, a sacrifice and Mancuso's fly accounted for the other Cardinal tally.

Ed Don George Makes Kampfer Yell 'Uncle'

Hans Kampfer could not stand the pressure of Ed Don George's arm lock and gave up after 29 minutes of the feature wrestling bout last night before 1,100 fans in Turner's Arena.

George administered the arm lock throughout the bout and finally Kampfer could stand it no longer and became the first grappler here in months to give in.

Two draws, instead of the usual one, marked the preliminary card, the Green Hornet and Len Macaluso battling to a 30-minute stalemate in a rough semiwindup, while Milo Steinborn and Fred Grobmeier could not reach a decision in a half-hour.

Tommy Rae used a body press to toss Ed Newman in 14 minutes, while Maurice Chappele required 15 minutes to pin Wild Man Zim with a dropkick and body press.

G. U. Freshmen Swamp Md. Frosh, 19 to 11

Maryland's cub baseball nine outhit the yearlings of Georgetown University yesterday at College Park, but nine errors contributed to a 19-11 defeat.

In the opening inning the Hoya frosh jumped on Lloyd Roberts for five hits and nine runs. The Terrapins tossed in seven errors to help the District team's cause along. After the Little Liners scored one run in each the first, second, third, and fourth frames the Hoyas drove "Reds" Davis, Maryland's second hurler, to the showers with a bombardment of five runs, both in the fifth and sixth sessions.

Let ME write this one!

How Regal put the X-RAY on shoe fitting!

YOU needn't expect any fancy words in this! I'm just a Regal Shoe salesman — not a professional ad-writer! But I'd like to get a few things off my chest.

For instance, I've known for a long time that a lot of well-dressed men were going around wearing brutally misfitted shoes! The funny thing was, most of them didn't even know it! They didn't realize that a lot of these aches and pains they felt came from cramming their feet into shoes that were too short, or too narrow, or both. They didn't stop to think that a poorly fitted shoe can't possibly hold its shape.

Anyway, I knew it, but I didn't have proof. So the Regal Shoe Company went after the facts — with an X-RAY MACHINE! In office buildings and industrial plants, they X-rayed hundreds of feet of men with their shoes on. Showed the position of the bones right in the shoes! And according to nationally famous foot specialists, those X-ray photographs clearly indicated that—

1 MAN OUT OF 3 is wearing shoes which, on account of improper fitting, may result in serious physical and nervous ailments — even though they seem to cause only slight discomfort!

That's true even of men who wear the highest priced shoes.

And that's why Regal has spent more than $100,000, and 40 years of research, to develop "PRESCRIPTION FIT"— the exclusive fitting system that measures and records the length and width of BOTH feet at once, in SITTING, STANDING and STEPPING POSITIONS! . . . The world's most nearly perfect fitting system.

There's more to Regal Shoes than fit and comfort! There's authentic style! There's quality of leather and workmanship! And there's world-beating value—because Regal sells only through 83 Regal Shoe Stores at one coast-to-coast price, $5.95. And remember—because Regal standards of quality are never lowered, the Regal price — always as low as possible — has always been subject to change based on cost of materials.

GOOD FIT. This X-ray shows sufficient length and width to allow bones of feet to function naturally.

Sterling Clark's Colchis Wins Ral Parr Purse at Pimlico

Joe Ray Runs Second; Son Islam Third

Jockey Al Schmidl Rides Winner; Race Is Worth $2,620 To Owner Clark

Special Dispatch to The Post

Pimlico, Md., May 1.—The Ral Parr, sixth and feature race on today's eight-race card, was reduced to a five-horse field when High Celerity and Fresh Start were late scratches after Fade and Halcyona had been declared out early this morning. Although losing four of its starters, the race lost none of its interest. R. Sterling Clark's Colchis, one that showed promise during the Havre de Grace meeting, went to the post as an even money favorite and the way he ran it looked like the bettors really knew their business. The Happy Argo gelding took command at the sixteenth pole and drew out to win by a length and a half. Joe Ray, winner of the Bowie Kindergarten, lasted to save the place with Son Islam third.

When the break came, the fans were given a brief thrill when Highborough, a first time starter belonging to G. D. Widener, took command. The gelding held the lead briefly and was then joined by Joe Ray, Colchis and Treemontier. In the run around the turn Joe Ray found racing room on the rail and took command from Highborough.

Turning for home it appeared to be anybody's race, with Son Islam moving into contention on the inside. Colchis was put to a drive by Jockey Al Schmidl and proved too good for his opponents in the final drive.

The race, which was worth $2,620 to Owner Clark, boosted the gelding's earnings to $3,620 and made him the probable favorite for the Pimlico Kindergarten to be run the last Friday of the meeting. The time for the 4½ furlongs was 53 3-5, only one-fifth off the track record and the fastest time for the race in its four runnings. The winner closed at even money on the board and when the result was official, the mutuel department posted a $4.20 mutuel.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

Gen. Manager Matt Daiger announced today that on Saturday the infield mutuels would be open. Daiger expects a record crowd at Pimlico for the running of the $10,000 Pimlico Oaks with Crispin Oglebay's Level Best as the top attraction. The infield mutuels are always open on Preakness Day, but rarely do the advance expectations warrant opening these facilities on other days. Given good weathr this Saturday Pimlico should score a new high in attendance for a first Saturday of the spring meeting. As is the custom at old Pimlico the broadcast description of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs will be put over the loud speaker system Saturday afternoon. The race will occur about time for Pimlico's last event, approximately 6 p. m., (E. S. T.). Equipet, owned by Breckinridge Long, Washington sportsman, was shipped to New York to fulfill her engagement in the Demoiselle Stakes Saturday. James Fitzsimmons has engaged Johnny Gilbert to handle one of the horses he will saddle for the Preakness. Porter Roberts will guide Bold Irishman and Gilbert probobly will be up on King Cole or Choppy Sea. Level Best, probable favorite in Saturday's running of the $10,000 Pimlico Oaks, had another tune up for the mile-and-one-sixteenth event this morning when she breezed six furlongs in 1.15. Crispin Oglebay's filly was timed the half in :48-4-5. Dark Imp, the Wheatley Stable's candidate for the Oaks, indicated readiness by stepping a half mile in :48-2-5. Andrew Jackson Joyner, dean of American trainers, notified the Pimlico management he was sending George D. Widener's Your Chance here Saturday to run in the Dixie. The colt is being conditioned at the Erdenheim Farm of his owner near Philadelphia. Joyner also said that Eight Thirty would not be here to fulfill his Dixie engagement. Churchill Downs is expected to supply three Dixie starters. They are Woodvale Stable's Haltal, Valdina Farm's Viscounty and Milky Way Farm's Gallahadion, which finished in that order in the Clark Handicap last Saturday. Haltal was third in the Widener Cup last winter. Gallahadion runs at Churchill Downs today and Viscounty demonstrated his form by turning in a mile trial in 1.39-3-5 on Tuesday. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—PIMLICO LADY is dropping way down the claiming class ladder and should take this field. PLEASANT LADY has early foot. MISS FIX IT always runs well here.

Second race—MAD BUNNY was off in a tangle in that last start and should take top money in this event. STEEL BEAM has two good races to recommend. TOWER MAID must be considered.

Third race—THE MAYER ENTRY of OSSABAW and DOLLY'S LOVE should come up favorites in the race and I believe they will score. GOOD CHANCE is always best over this course. BAY DEAN could be close.

Fourth race—REAL VALUE has a world of speed and should never look back in this field. STAR CHARTER has had bad luck repeatedly and might surprise, BECOMLY is a contender but would appreciate an off track.

Fifth race—SINGLE forced the pace in a fast run race at the Graw and should handle these. FRESH START is a new one from the Vanderbilt barn and is reported fast. CHOPSTICKS has worked well.

Sixth race—PETE JR. had no chance in that last when he was shuffled back soon after the start. Is off the rail here and I'm going to string along. CAPE COD is in best form and has a lot of early foot. SKY LANE should account for the short end.

Seventh race—All of the contenders appear to be on the eligible list in this distance affair. If able to get in the starting lineup, I'm going back to BROOKIE BOY. SHOWABAL showed a good effort here and might be a factor. ASTER PRINCESS might take it all at a price.

Eighth race—THE UTTERBACK ENTRY of PLAY GOLD and CANDLE ENDS appears well placed and should earn the top award. The former ran Bain Marie to a dead heat in that last start. NOSY is the speed horse and should last for a portion. BLACK GROUSE has won all his starts this year but is stepping up a good bit.

Best bet—PETE JR.

More Than 750 Are Expected At Insurance Sales Congress

Carroll Day to Be Chief Speaker at Session May 16

More than 750 life insurance men are expected to attend the twenty-third annual joint Washington-Baltimore Sales Congress to be held May 16 in the Wardman Park Hotel. The session is sponsored by the life underwriters associations of the two cities.

Principal speaker will be Carroll C. Day, president of the Oklahoma City Better Business Bureau and chairman of that city's planning commission. Mr. Day is Oklahoma manager of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Another speaker will be Baldwin B. Bane, director of registration of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

This year's sales congress "represents a radical departure from past programs," according to Raymond A. DuFour, general agent for Pacific Mutual, this year's congress chairman.

The program, to be conducted by the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau of Hartford, is geared for practical use by the average life insurance man, Mr. DuFour said. It gets away from the old formula of having "million-dollar producers" tell average agents their magical secrets of success. It provides the agent with practical ideas for daily usage.

The sessions will be under the personal direction of John Marshall Holcombe, jr., manager of the bureau, asisted by B. N. Woodson, director of service.

The bureau conducting the congress is a nonprofit organization supported by the major life insurance companies. Serving on the committee with Mr. DuFour in arranging the congress are: Earle R. Hough, Lincoln National; Paul W. Hammack, Prudential; Warren S. Stone, C. L. U., New York Life, and Arthur H. Minor, Prudential.

Arrangements anticipate an attendance of 750 to 900 life insurance men from Baltimore, Cumberland, Hagerstown, Frederick, Washington and other nearby points.

Week's Loadings Show 11.9% Gain Over Year Ago

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 721,702 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was an increase of 13,051 cars, or 1.8 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 76,898 cars, or 11.9 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 136,512 cars, or 23.3 per cent, compared with 1939.

All classes of loadings showed gains with the exception of forest products and coke. The rise in total loadings was slightly more than seasonal.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index of loadings, based on 1929-1930 as 100, advanced to 76.9 compared with 76.2 the previous week, and 68.6 a year ago.

Private contracts were only half as large as the week before and less than 1 per cent greater than a year ago.

Jobless Rolls At 11-Year Low During Month

By the Associated Press

New York, May 1.—Unemployment in the United States fell to 6,142,000 in March, its lowest level for the month in 11 years, the National Industrial Conference Board estimated today. The figure is 3,000,000 lower than the board's estimate for March, 1940, and 887,000 under February, 1941.

At the same time, the research organization said, the Nation's employed rose by 934,000 to a total of 49,373,000, the largest figure since September, 1929, when 49,715,000 persons had jobs. The March figure is 3,500,000 above March, 1940, representing not only the absorption of unemployed but also an increase in the number of employables.

The board included in its figures for unemployed 2,472,000 persons enrolled in the CCC, WPA, and out-of-school NYA, projects in March. If these were listed in the employed total, only 3,670,000 persons would be considered without work out of a total national labor force of about 55,500,000.

U. S. to Build Six Million Tons of Ships

This is one of a series of articles designed to inform the public of the progress being made by American industry in providing the weapons for national defense.

The American shipbuilding industry is now engaged in one of the mightiest naval construction programs of all time. It calls for some 6,000,000 tons of naval and merchant shipping to be built at a cost of $10,000,000,000. And there will be more.

More than $5,000,000,000 of the $12,000,000,000 in defense contracts let out since last June have gone into ship construction.

The greater part of this huge job is done by private industry. Industrial shipyards are building 543 of the 643 ships of all kinds already under construction the first of this year. These run all the way from battleships to torpedo boats and cargo vessels.

The overwhelming share of this building is, of course, for the Navy. Between $7,000,000,000 and $8,000,000,000 is being spent on naval construction, including new shipbuilding facilities. This huge job is set for completion in 1947, but it is running well ahead of schedule.

Precise figures are Navy secrets, but it is known that standard schedules—such as four years to build a battleship, two years for a destroyer—are being reduced sharply. Destroyers, for instance, which normally are two years building, are now being completed in less than half that time. The 35,000-ton North Carolina, first battleship to be built for the Navy in 18 years, was ready five and a half months ahead of schedule. The destroyer Edison was placed in commission four and a half months ahead of contract time.

This mighty program is truly a national effort. Every State in the Union contributes to the task. Men from 125 trades and professions in all parts of the country are involved, either directly on construction or on parts and fittings for Uncle Sam's new ships.

Standard Gas Maps $56,161,000 Program

New York, May 1 (AP).—Standard Gas & Electric System has planned a construction budget for 1941 aggregating $56,161,000, which compares with $2,397,649 spent by the same properties in 1940.

Domestic Airlines Fly 17% More Miles

New York, May 1 (AP).—Domestic airlines flew 85,864,487 revenue passenger miles in March, an increase of 17.5 per cent over 73,096,779 miles in March, 1940, and a gain of 14.2 per cent over the February total of 75,170,116 miles.

Bank Excess Reserves Rise $10,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday lendable excess reserves of banks increased $10,000,000 to a total of $5,770,000,000 in the week ended April 30.

The increase was due mostly to Treasury spending.

The board's statement said:

During the week ended April 30, member bank reserve balances increased $18,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from increases of $23,000,000 in gold stock and $4,000,000 in Treasury currency, and decreases of $82,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $16,000,000 in Treasury cash, offset in part by a decrease of $5,000,000 in reserve bank credit and increases of $79,000,000 in money in circulation and $21,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Excess reserves of member banks on April 30 were estimated to be approximately $5,770,000,000, an increase of $10,000,000 for the week."

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended April 30, 1941, were reported as follows:

Cotton Futures

New York, May 1 (AP).—Cotton futures followed the general trend in commodities today, closing 5 to 9 points higher. Best prices, shaded by late profit selling, were the highest recorded since the summer of 1937.

Further buying of contracts was based on hopeful sentiment created by the House action on farm aid legislation and indications of a more active movement in cotton textiles in the Worth Street market. The coarse yarn section accounted for the bulk of today's activity. Prices on sheetings were advanced.

No exports yesterday; season so far, 870,043 bales. Port receipts, 2,732. Port stocks, 3,358,780.

Sugar Futures

New York, May 1 (AP).—Domestic sugar contract showed a renewal of life today on active buying and all positions closed 4 points higher. Sales totaled 16,050 tons.

Revival of demand was associated with the report of plans for a 2,000,000-ton shipping pool for movement of lease-lend supplies, which accentuated trade fears of a cargo-space shortage.

The world contract closed ⅛ higher to 1⅛ lower. Sales, 12,950 tons. Raw sugars sold at 3.35 for nearby and 3.40 for distant delivery. Refined was unchanged at 5.10.

Import Staples Set New Tops; Buying Heavy

By the Associated Press

Peak price marks for the steep March-April climb in commodities were eclipsed in many cases yesterday as a new broad buying movement, centering in the start in import items, finally spread to the general field of speculative staples.

Worry over danger of a still more acute shortage of ship bottoms was suggested by trading circles as an important factor in the buying revival.

Among the larger gainers in New York futures markets were: Santos Coffee, up .12 to .15 of a cent a pound; cottonseed oil, up .17 to .19 of a cent; wool tops, up 1 to 1.6 cents; domestic sugar (raws), up .04 of a cent; cotton, up .10 to .65 cents a bale; cocoa, up .29 to .31 of a cent; rubber, up .15 to .35 of a cent; silk, up 1½ to 2 cents; hides, up .15 to .17 of a cent.

Chicago wheat and corn lagged, as in the previous session. The former closed unchanged to ½ of a cent a bushel higher and the latter unchanged to ¼ cent higher.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples rose to 81.88 per cent of the 1926 average from 1.77 per cent Wednesday.

Earnings Reports

By the Associated Press

Douglas Aircraft Co. reported for the March quarter net profit of $1,819,535, equal to $3.03 a share on its capital stock. This compared with $1,804,877, or $3 a share after making special provision of $775,000 for estimated olss on two contracts in the comparable quarter in 1940. No provision was made for excess profit taxes in the latest quarter.

The comany's backlog as of February 28 amounted to $332,170,045, including $198,165,771 in contracts on a cost plus fixed fee basis.

The negligible increase in profit despite an increase of 40 per cent in sales in the first quarter reflected greater costs and expenditures necessitated by the demands for speed and quantity under the national defense program, the company's statement said. Also, a larger portion of low-profit deliveries were made to the United States Government in the first quarter than in previous periods.

Reo Motors, Inc., cut its loss in the first quarter of 1941 to $19,272 from $367,671 in the comparable quarter last year. The company said the loss in January and February amounted to $56,002 but March operations resulted in a profit of $36,730.

Standard Brands, Inc., food concern, reported for the March quarter net profit of $2,361,392, equal to 17 cents a share on its common stock. This compared with $2,341,397, also 17 cents in the like period of 1940.

Hershey Chocolate Corporation reported for the quarter ended March 31 net profit of $2,182,874, equal to $2.44 a common share, against $1,696,657, or $1.73 a share, in the first quarter a year ago.

New Jersey Zinc Co. reported March quarter profit of $2,813,509, equal to $1.43 a share on its capital stock, compared with $1,765,112, or 90 cents a share, a year ago.

General Foods Corporation reported for the March quarter net profit of $4,502,928, equal to 82 cents a share on the common, compared with $4,478,795, also 82 cents a share, in the like 1940 quarter.

A. M. Byers Co., makers of steel pipe, reported for the March quarter net profit of $290,561, equal, after current dividend requirements only on the 7 per cent preferred, to 72 cents a common share. This compared with profit of $65,307, or $1.15 a share on the preferred, in the comparable 1940 period.

L. C. Smith & Corona Typewriters, Inc., for the initial 1941 quarter, reported net income of $422,390 after all charges, including provision for normal Federal income tax at a 30 per cent rate and excess profits tax at the prevailing rate. These earnings were equal to $1.47 a common share. In the first quarter last year, net income was $123,169 or 38 cents a common share.

American & Foreign Power Co. and subsidiaries, serving 1,053 communities in 13 nations, reported today income for 1940 of $5,346,889, or $6.55 a share for the combined $7 and $6 preferred stocks, compared with adjusted 1939 income of $4,668,023, or $5.39 a combined share.

C. E. Calder, president, pointed out to stockholders that 92 per cent of the company's total investment is in Latin-America "and its future is thus closely linked with that of the Latin-American republics."

Monsanto Chemical Co. reported net income of $1,354,291, or 98 cents a share, in the first quarter of 1941 on a sales volume of 14,442,926. Sales were 40 per cent higher than in the first three months of last year. Earnings compared with $1,642,037, or 1.23 a share, in the first quarter of 1940.

Midland Steel Products Co. reported first quarter net profit of $543,643 after estimated Federal taxes, against 597,682 for the same period of 1940. Directors reelected President E. J. Kulas and all other officers, and declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the common, payable July 1, to holders of June 13.

Stocks Continue to Drift Aimlessly; Interest Rivets on Rising Commodities

New York, May 1.—Stocks and bonds took back seats in today's market while speculative attention again centered on climbing commodities. The share list, ragged at the start, never developed a definite trend and closing prices were moderately irregular. Dealings were exceptionally light throughout, however, and weakness was a rarity in most departments.

Many potential stock purchasers continued to hold aloof, brokers said, because of fears of another war upset following the Grecian collapse, worries over the next move of the United States in the conflict, doubts regarding labor peace and apprehension as to the forthcoming tax burden and extension of Government price controls and priorities.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished unchanged at 39.2. Transfers of 310,040 shares were the smallest for a full session since March 5, and compared with 406,350 the day before.

Renewed strength in imported staples was attributed to the idea that these may be affected by nearby shipping shortages resulting from the conversion of much ocean tonnage for the transportation of defense materials. Outstanding were futures of tin, coffee, silk, rubber and cocoa. Cotton was up 10 to 65 cents a bale. Wheat at Chicago was unchanged to ½ cent a bushel higher and corn also was unchanged to up ¼.

Depressing sentiment was the sale of a Stock Exchange seat for $20,000, a new low since 1898. Rails were not particularly responsive to a more than seasonal increase in last week's freight loadings.

Douglas Aircraft dropped 1½ points as the company disclosed first quarter net was about equal to that of the 1940 period notwithstanding a large upturn in sales. Taxes, heavier costs and lower profit margins were given as partial causes.

McKesson & Robbins preferred got up 1⅛ to a new 1941 top. Other gainers included U. S. Steel, Standard Oil of N. J., Kennecott, Santa Fe, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, U. S. Rubber and Loft.

The recently slumping American Telephone held its decline to ¼. In arrears were Bethlehem Steel, Consolidated Edison, Great Northern Pennsylvania, Westinghouse, General Motors, International Harvester, J. C. Penney and Union Carbide.

In the Curb, Merritt-Chapman & Scott preferred "A" was up 8¼ points on sales of 50 shares. Gulf Oil improved along with Electric Bond & Share, Bell Aircraft and Pantepec. Among losers were Bell Telephone of Canada, Aluminum of America, Pepperell and Republic Aviation. Transactions were approximated 66,000 shares against 79,000 Wednesday.

The great bulk of bonds idled in a narrow range today with more issues unchanged or slightly lower than had plus signs at the close. On average, the rails lost .1 of a point as measured by the Associated Press averages. Utilities, industrials and the foreign groups were unchanged and the low-yields added .1 of a point largely as a result of minor markups in Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s, Consumers Power 3¼s, and Texas Corporation 3s.

Transfers of $5,952,700, par value, compared with $7,789,500 Wednesday.

United States Governments also kept in a shell all day. On the stock exchange only 4 issues traded with changes negligible. Over the counter prices were shaded slightly, especially in the long terms.

A. T. & T. Plans $150,000,000 Financing

By the Associated Press

New York, May 1.—The New York Times said today the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. was considering a large-scale financing program involving issuance of approximately $150,000,000 of new securities.

According to the Times more than $50,000,000 would represent new money to be used for construction and expansion to meet the increasingly heavy demands of national defense. Funds also would be provided to refund $95,000,000 of A. T. & T. 3½ per cent debentures due November 1, 1943.

The company has made no announcement on the subject other than President Gifford's comment at the recent annual meeting that the company might do some borrowing during the coming year.

Most recent financing by the telephone company was last December, when $140,000,000 of new capital was raised by sale of 2¾ per cent debentures to a group of insurance coompanies.

Central Nine Meets Anacostia Today

Tech Visits Roosevelt; Eastern Host

Blair Meets Bethesda In Outside Feature; Central and Western Nines Are Favored

Three games today, each involving interdivisional rivals, are expected to increase Central's dominance of the western division standings in the interhigh baseball series and break up the threeway tie for first in the eastern division.

Central, with two straight victories behind it despite a preseason underdog rating, takes on Anacostia. Western's potent nine moves over to Eastern as it seeks to overtake Central in the west ratings. Roosevelt's twice-beaten club plays host to Tech.

Blair Meets Bethesda

Five other schoolboy clashes in this vicinity are planned, headlined by the meeting of Montgomery Blair and Bethesda-Chevy Chase on the field of the latter. All games will start at 3:30 p. m.

Their performances to date indicate Central, Western and Tech should emerge victorious from today's encounters. Yet every club in the series, with the exception of the first two mentioned, has lost at least one game and it isn't too late for the leaders to fall before underrated foes.

Both Central and Western have shown impressive batting strength to date, while Tech has depended mainly on the pitching of big Buddy Webb. With Charley Hines and Bill Grey hurling, Western also boasts a real mound threat.

On the other side of the chart, Eastern appears the most likely to turn in an upset today. An early favorite, it has yet to show the plate punch anticipated. Anacostia, scrappy as usual, doesn't seem to have the big guns carried by Central.

Pieces of Haight

Henry Morgenthau, Jr.
Secretary of Treasury, Washington, D. C.
Dear Boss:

I remember when I came off the press at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. You were there that day as the man cut me off the sheet nd laid me to one side. I wasn't even dry behind the ears of my Abe Lincoln portrait but I was old enough to hear you say that when any cog in the wheel of the Treasury Department had a complaint he was to come to you with it. Well, I was a crisp, innocent $5 bill, No. H7952252A of the 1939 series to be exact, and I lived the life of Riley at first.

I was bundled up with a stack of my brothers and finally found my way into the pay envelope of a clerk at the Weather Bureau. He took he home that night and tried to hold me out when he settled with his wife. But she wouldn't have it that way and grabbed me out of his hand. She had a powerful grip and I resented the treatment but after I was around in her pocketbook for a while I was glad the man didn't get me.

Wasn't a bad life in that purse. She used a fair grade of face powder and I had company. I made friends with a faded $1 bill, I forget his number, and he said that I'd probably go back and forth between the wives and the neighborhood grocery cash register for a long time. He said he had been doing it for years. Well, he was right.. I wasn't disturbed for several days and finally went to the grocery. That was my first experience in the big time. I was up to my neck in company. When the draw was closed, there were a lot of arguments in our rack.

I was glad when I saw a twenty slipped into the draw and I was taken out and handed to a woman in change. Well, boss, I stayed right in that neighborhood. I went to the beauty shop, the laundry and the drugstore. I had a few lipstick scars but I didn't mind. Finally, the woman who was keeping me at the time picked up her purse one day and I soon realized that I was being ridden in a car. She began talking with her companion about what a louse some guy named Bennings was and about the chances of Careful Miss in the third and about "6 and 3" in the daily double. It was all strange language to me but not for long. I got to the race track and then my troubles began.

Listen, Boss, if you want to get even with any of your currency, just send it to a race track. She put me into a window and a guy punched something and she got a piece of pasteboard and I was shoved into the most untidy hovel of bills I have ever been in. Then some man rushed me away, we were counted and soon I was going out through another window.

I was almost squeezed in half. One fellow had me and paraded along in front of the windows for ten minutes saying, "Should I or shouldn't I" until the head on my Lincoln portrait was throbbing like a sawmill engine.

When I left the track that day I was in an alligator-skin purse. I was jammed down in the pocket of a guy with only an ill-smelling $2 bill for company. This master of mine was fuming all the way to Baltimore. He was muttering to himself about some ride he got. I didn't exactly understand it but I was glad when he pushed me to the cashier in that Howard Street cafe.

Well, Boss, I've had a lot of experiences since. There was the Atlantic City convention, one with a sideshow but I guess I will have to wait until I get back to the Treasury Department to tell you about that one. I went to "Heilza Poppin" one night and somebody won me on a radio program. Then I made a trip to the West Coast in the billfold of a bus driver. I had nothing to complain about during those days although I spent one terrible week in Hollywood when Jack Benny carried me around in his shoe.

I didn't mind figuring in that crap game they put on one night at a movie star's party.

But I haven't had any real reason to complain until now. Here's what happened. I finally get back to Washington and a woman uses me to pay for a subscription to The Washington Post. That was O. K., but later, a fellow by the name of Walter Haight appears at the cashier cage. He has a slip with "advance expenses" written on it and along with some other bills I find myself in his pocket.

I didn't mind that at first, but soon he began talking horses. That's all I heard—horses, horses, horses. Either he talked horses or he talked about some guys named Clarke, Manfuso and Davis. I met a 1912 quarter in his pocket and he told me all about this Haight. He said that Haight had been carrying him around for six months. "You wouldn't believe me but half the time I've been the only dough this Haight has had," said the two-bits. "But he's a past master at borrowing. Why he is always bumming a duece or an ace. His theme song seems to be 'If I know you, I owe you.' But I don't have to tell you, if you stay with him a few days, you'll get the idea."

Well, Mr. Secretary, the first thing I know I'm on the way to the Kentucky Derby. And I've got the idea. I thought I was going to get away from this Haight before the train got to Harpers Ferry. A waiter came through announcing dinner was being served in the diner and I pictured myself being paid to the steward and perhaps getting off the train at Cincinnati, but no such luck. I heard a rustling noise and I later learned that Haight had two ham sand wiches on hard rolls in his pocket and he ate those. A little later, I heard him say to himself, "Well, I'll put that meal down in this little expense book—one dinner on train, $1.95."

That wasn't so bad but darned if he doesn't sit by a couple of fellows who would buy and they sat there and talked horses and horses. Sometimes I wish you had made me a $500 bill, then I know I would never have to get close to a guy like Haight.

Well, Boss, we just went through Keyser, W. Va., and I thought I heard this Haight yawn. Even his snoring will be better than his horse talk so I'll sign off until tomorrow. I'll let you know how I come out.

Always your fin,
No. H. 7952252 A.

Louis-Conn Bout Definitely Set for June 18 in New York

By International News Service

New York, May 3.—The long-discussed fight between Champion Joe Louis and Billy Conn, light heavy title holder, for the world heavyweight championship was closed definitely today by Promoter Mike Jacobs for June 18 at New York's Polo Grounds.

Conn has been under contract for the engagement since last winter, but closing of the bout hung fire until Jacobs announced today that the match was all set, with the proviso that Louis successfully defend his crown against Buddy Baer at Washington on May 23.

In the event Baer should score an unexpected victory over the champion, he may be given the Conn fight, the winner to take on Louis or Baer, and Louis may tangle up in a return match, the winner to meet Conn, Jacobs said.

today, but it is feared it will be very crowded. Fishing Creek is a good bet for this weekend.

Correction: In the description of the fly retriever in Tuesday's column, it should have read—"which is nothing but a piece of lead and 20 feet of hard twisted 100-pound test fishing line tied to it."

A $5 bill to M. P. McInerney for the following yarn. This one has whiskers, Mac, but it shows how easy this contest is and what suckers we are. A $5 bill will be awarded each week for the best fish story.

The State Institution for the insane is built on the banks of the Truckee River east of Reno, Nevada. On one occasion when the guards were taking some of the patients out in the field for the day it was 6 a. m. One of the patients noticed a man sitting on the banks of the Truckee River fishing and when the guard was returning them to the wards about 5 p. m. this patient hollered to the man who was fishing and said, "Any luck?" The man answered back, "No luck. I haven't even had a bite yet." The patient asked him, "How long have you been fishing?" He answered, "Since 5 o'clock this morning." The patient then said, "It is now 5 o'clock in the evening. COME IN WITH US."

too, in contrast to their awful antics of yesterday. Leonard was helped over the humps by a pair of double plays behind him, but his knuckle ball was working with precision for the most part. He struck out five of the White Sox, and seven of the hits he allowed were singles.

Any ideas the White Sox had of getting back in the ball game in the ninth were dissipated by the Nats and Pete Appleton. Appleton was wild and pitched three runs to the Nats in the ninth.

Travis inspired the 1-0 lead the Nats gave Leonard in the first inning when he doubled into the right field corner. West's sacrifice moved him to third and Leonard worked a squeeze bunt down the first base line to get him home. From that point the Nats piled up a lead for Leonard in easy stages.

Deserving of a separate paragraph is Washington's second run. That was the Travis homer. He never made a more powerful swat in his big league career. It was a 400-foot blast that sailed high above the scoreboard in right center and ended up in the upper deck where few homers are hit.

Mickey Vernon and Buddy Lewis touched up Dietrich in the sixth to launch Washington's third run. Vernon singled to right and Lewis moved him to third with a single to left. Travis got him home by sending Solters back to the fence for his long fly.

In the eigth Cramer drew a walk from Appleton. He was forced by Lewis, but Appling threw wild in a double play attempt and Lewis went to second. From there he scored when Travis belted a double to the wall in center.

As for those three Washington runs in the ninth, Appleton walked West, pitched a two-bagger to Farrell, wild-pitched West home from third, hit Cramer in the back and saw two more runs score on Vernon's three-base blast to center. The Nats were hot stuff.

Griffith Officiates At Radbourne Dedication Service

By International News Service

Bloomington, Ill., May 1.—Bloomington indulged in a nostalgic orgy today to honor its greatest athletic hero, Charley (Old Hoss) Radbourne.

Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators of the American League, returned to his home town to officiate at servies dedicating a memorial to "Old Hoss."

Clark and Charley were boyhood pitching rivals, with Clark pitching for the Illinois State Normal University baseball team and Charley hurling for Illinois Wesleyan.

Both went to the major leagues. The "Old Hoss" burned out his arm in 1884 when he pitched 27 consecutive games to win a pennant for Providence.

What with what looks like half the Nation pouring into Washington these days to see the cherry blossoms, the monuments, the buildings and the scenery in general, it should be sociologically important to note what Washingtonians do when they have a few days to spare.

The answer is—they leave Washington. For instance, 200 members of the Congressional Secretaries Club are repairing en masse to Manhattan this week-end. Highlight of their visit will be seeing CBS's "hit Parade" in one of CBS's radio theaters tomorrow night. Arrangements for their seeing the popular radio show were made by Congressman Luther Patrick, of Alabama, through A. D. Willard, jr., general manager of WJSV, Columbia's station for the Nation's Capital.

And, speaking of crowds in Washington, since Paul Kain and his WJSV Orchestra opened on April 12, at Glen Echo Amusement Park, the 31-year-old atttendance record at the dancing pavilion has been broken three times on successive Saturday nights.

Last Saturday, April 26, the dancers numbered 1,800. The previous Saturday night they had totaled well over 1,700. On April 12, the number present was 1,600.

The highest previous total ever recorded was 1,500 one Saturday night in 1940. Paul is wondering just how much higher those pretty light fantastic figures can go.

Bridge

L. E. M. submits today's hand on which South declares at four spades, doubled and found five trumps, including the king and ten, held in one hand against him. But, strangely enough, the trump holding proved no obstacle to his contract, and with the help of the defense he scored two extra tricks. Declarer trapped East into an underruffing situation. Here is the way contributor L. E. M. describes the play:

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	4 ♡	4 ♠	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: ♡ K.

"What tricks does fickle dame distribution play. Poor South, five trumps to the king, ten bunched against him; but (1) he is over every one of East's trumps; (2) he has exactly the same length as East in each suite; (3) diamond ace and club king are both in the right spot.

"The opening lead by the heart king was taken by the ace and a small heart ruffed. The queen of spades was played. East covering with the king and the ace winning. The queen of clubs was next led and finessed successfully. A second finesse was taken with the jack, and the club ace felled the king. East and South discarding diamonds. The club ten followed and again diamonds were discarded. Each trumped the club nine, and declarer overtrumped. A diamond lead to dummy's king was won by the ace; and East, most shockingly, returned a low spade, which was taken by dummy's nine.

"Another club lead sealed up the last three tricks for six-odd. Of course, East can hold it to five by leading back a diamond at trick ten, but five-odd is sure. And South did not really have an opening bid nor North a four-spade raise!"
